Veteran Hal M. Stanley Is Elected Secretary-Treasurer Emeritus; Seymour Takes Duties.

By HAROLD MARTIN, Constitution Staff Writer.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 22.—

The Georgia Press Association tonight threw the gage to political office-seekers who pay large sums to carry their messages to the people by radio and mail and demand reams of free publicity from newspapers.

In a resolution passed by the board of managers, the association served notice to all prospective candidates for state political office that its members will consider it an "unfriendly act to use other paid media to the exclusion of newspaper advertising" and then "mail requests for free publicity to the newspapers."

The resolution is being sent to all members of the association for signature in order that it might be sent to all prospective candidates, who thus will face a united front against excessive demands upon newspapers when other media are being favored to the extent of thousands of dollars.

Stanley Honored. The association's beloved veteran secretary, Hal M. Stanley, tonight was honored by election as secretary-treasurer emeritus, and the duties of his office were turned over to James Seymour, field manager of the association. Mr. Stanley, as editor of the old Dublin Courier-Herald, was elected president of the association in 1907. Two years later he became secretary, and in 1937 the duties of treasurer also were added to his work. Tonight he turned over his duties after more than 20 years of valuable service to the press of Georgia.

Members of the association at the Thirteenth Annual Press Institute heard tonight that Edison Marshall will devote the remainder of his days writing what he wants to write and not what he thinks will sell. The tiny, white-haired author of swashbuckling adventure stories arrived here and will speak tomorrow on "Writing for Love or Money." He proved he is settling down at his Augusta home to write a serious novel after 20 years of wandering up and down the face of the earth, exploring, big-game hunting and soaking up the atmosphere of the far places.

Earlier in the day, the association heard from Robert L. Dornan, news picture executive, that

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Feb. 22.

(P)—Successful television relay, with which engineers have struggled for years, was declared an actuality tonight by a General Electric Company official.

Solution of this chain, or relay, problem generally is credited with delaying widespread inauguration of television. Otherwise reception theoretically is limited to the visual horizon.

High in the Helderberg mountains, near Schenectady, engineers attacked the problem. For weeks a television station there has picked up and rebroadcast programs put on the air from atop the towering Empire State building in New York City.

Tonight Dr. W. R. G. Baker, manager of the General Electric television and radio department, termed the experiment "highly successful."

"Within a short time," he asserted, "people in Chicago may see the sun set in New York while it still is high above the horizon in Chicago."

Unlike radio chains, which deliver programs to stations for rebroadcast by wire, the predicted television would go into the nation's homes by a series of aerial pickups and rebroadcasts.

Without chain operation, each television station must operate independently in a restricted area.

Explaining the experiment, involving receipt of National Broadcasting Company programs from New York City by a receiver 130 miles distant, and simultaneous rebroadcast by Station W2XB, Dr. Baker said advantage is taken of a "trough" created by the Hudson river through a mountain range.

Where and Why Relief Funds Go

Cold Figures, Cited in Dollars, Mills Prove All Money Intended for Welfare Never Has Been Raised; 1939 Outlay Shows Decrease.

By W. M. HINES, City Editor The Constitution.

Three members of The Constitution's reportorial staff—Harold Martin, Betty Mathis and Willard Cope—in the past few weeks have written factual stories of the desperate condition of thousands of families in Fulton county who are dependent upon the county welfare board, which in turn is dependent upon the county commissioners and grand juries to obtain sufficient funds to feed, clothe, and house suffering people who appeal to the welfare board for help.

An effort was made during this same time to clarify what actually happens to the money raised by taxation which a confident public believed went directly to fill the stomachs of the hungry, and to clothe their shivering bodies.

In a table, showing the disbursements of money raised for indigents, which was printed in The Constitution last Sunday morning, it was made clear that only approximately $13,000 monthly went directly to feed the needy. Yet the public believed $59,000 was being raised monthly by a tax levy of 2.392 mills for this purpose.

Figures Not Refuted.

There has been no refutation of the figures in the table, showing just why all the dollars which the public thought it was paying for food, clothing, and shelter for the needy never reached the needy.

The table disproved certain charges that administration of relief is excessive.

It demonstrated that Fulton county commissioners diverted about half the money raised for indigent relief to pay other county costs which had nothing to do with feeding hungry men, women and children.

The following figures demonstrate that all the money intended to be raised for relief never has been raised for that purpose, and that Fulton county in 1939 actually raised $144,000 a year less for feeding the destitute than was raised

TAIPALE FAILURE IMPERILS WHOLE RUSSIAN ATTACK

Inability to Crack Bottleneck Demonstrates Reds Still Are Far From an Early, Decisive Victory.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON, Associated Press Staff Writer.

The Soviet army's failure to crack the Taipale sector of the Mannerheim line, despite a mass attack by two full divisions on a front of probably less than five miles, demonstrates again that Russia still is far from achieving an early decisive victory over Finland.

While the Finns hold the Taipale bottleneck on the eastern flank of the Karelian isthmus, Russian successes in the center and on the west flank are of questionable value. The persistent Red army attack that has cost many thousands of Russian lives may lead not to victory, but new disasters if it fails to break the Taipale front soon.

The Taipale sector appears a more vital front for both sides than its western Mannerheim line "anchor" mate, Koivisto, which the Russians claim to have captured. Unless Red forces can also crack the Finns' defense on the eastern flank on the isthmus, their whole attack might fail, resulting in another Finnish "miracle" victory.

Red army leaders are alive to that danger. The Finns report that two full Soviet divisions were engaged in the most recent mass attack on the Taipale front. That represents a force of somewhere between 30,000 and 40,000 men.

Russian strategy for concentrated attack on the Karelian isthmus front called for turning the Taipale flank first of all. That would have eased greatly the head-on drive in the center of the isthmus and on the west flank.

The objective of the Taipale attack is to turn that waterline defense, permitting Red forces to sweep down behind it from the east. Finnish withdrawal on a wide front across the eastern half of the isthmus to take up other defense positions well in the rear of their present line would be necessary if the Russians broke through at Taipale.

Russian failure to turn the Taipale flank soon, or to make progress on the far wider flanking operation around Lake Ladoga, could imperil the whole Red attack on the isthmus. The Finns are strung along an extending Russian right flank. Harrying attacks by the Finns on Russian communication lines are certain to come.

Bad Weather Would Help.

Bad weather, such as the blizzard which interrupted intensive Red bombing raids designed to synchronize with the drive to take Viipuri, or a warm weather spell which might bog down Russian mechanized forces and supply lines, would favor the Finns. Either condition would permit the Finnish light, fast-moving troops to undertake hit-and-run attacks on that exposed Russian flank.

The desperate Red effort to smash through the Taipale bottleneck at any cost and force a general Finn retirement across the entire isthmus front can be traced to realization of that danger. While that eastern pivot of the Mannerheim line holds, there are increasing possibilities of a Red army disaster of even greater proportions than any that has yet occurred in Finland.

BRITAIN'S CENSOR TACTICS DECRIED

Wave of Congressional Protests Denounce Use of Bayonets at Bermuda

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(P)—

Senator Pittman, Democrat, Nevada, asserted today that Great Britain made "an excessive and very foolish use" of its right as a belligerent to censor American mail by sending armed marines aboard the Pan-American Airways clipper at Bermuda.

The disclosure that 2,600 pounds of mail had been seized in Bermuda on January 18 at the point of bayonets after censorship officials had been ordered off the flying boat, brought a wave of protest in congressional circles. Included in the censored mail were letters addressed to Germany, Italy, Sweden, Portugal, the Azores and other points.

"Foolish Use of Right."

Senator Truman, Democrat, Missouri, suggested, in commenting on the incident, that the United States retaliate by cancelling future clipper flights to Bermuda and by prohibiting the landing of British planes in this country.

Pittman, who is chairman of the foreign relations committee, told reporters that there was "no doubt" that the British had the right to examine for contraband all the mail aboard the clipper, including that addressed to neutral countries.

High-Handed"—Clark.

Senator Clark, declaring that the British were using "high-handed procedure" in "taking American mails at the point of a bayonet and rifling them," won unanimous consent to insert in the senate record a newspaper account of the Bermuda incident.

Senator Truman said he thought the interference with American mails could be stopped if this country took a "firm stand" and retaliated for the Bermuda incident.

GENERAL FRANCO RELEASES DAHL

Seven Other Americans Who Fought for Republicans Also Are Freed.

MADRID, Feb. 22.—(P)—Harold Dahl, the American aviator of fortune whose beautiful blonde actress wife helped save him from a firing squad by sending her picture to General Franco, finally was a free man tonight.

Along with seven other Americans who fought for the Spanish Republican army, Dahl, after nearly three years as a prisoner of war, awaited only a boat ride for his return to the United States.

(The news was too good for his wife, Edith Rogers Dahl, to believe. In the Philadelphia night club where, with the billings "She Stopped the Firing Squad," she is doing a Spanish dance specialty, she refused to celebrate until she got official word from the United States State Department.)

Last of Prisoners.

Dahl and his companions were the last of 106 American prisoners released since the war ended last March. Most of them were captured fighting with the Abraham Lincoln battalion on the Ebro river in 1938.

The United States embassy announced the release of Dahl and the other prisoners. Tonight Dahl, Clarence Alvie Blair, of Red Granite, Wis., and Cohn Haber, of New York, were at Seville, waiting to sail on the American Export liner Exiria for the United States tomorrow.

Other Americans.

Others released—after intervention of the State Department in Washington—are Lawrence Fant Doran, listed in records here as a native of Los Angeles whose wife lives at 3033 Liberty avenue, Southgate, Cal.; Anthony Peter Kehrlicker, a native of Polk county, Iowa; Rudolph Opara, of Cleveland; Alf Abdrassen, naturalized American from Norway, and Conrad Stojewa, of California.

NEW STEP MOVES TURKEY TOWARD FULL WAR FOOTING

Istanbul Government Decides to Group Exporters, Importers Into Controlled Syndicates.

MOSCOW, Feb. 22.—(AP) Soviet Russia even as she is embroiled with Finland in the north is testing anew her defenses in the vital south where her wealth in oil is concentrated.

Conclusion of important winter maneuvers in the Black sea of the fleet commanded by Admiral Oktyabrsky was disclosed today simultaneously with word that a training blackout had been decreed from Tuesday until further notice in Baku, Caspian seaport from which the oil supplies of the region are shipped.

"The fleet was, and shall be a reliable guard of the southern borders of the U. S. S. R.," Admiral Oktyabrsky announced after the return of the Black sea warships to their Sevastopol base.

War Footing.

Meanwhile, in Istanbul the Turkish government took another

Among other war news, on Page 18, will be found the dramatic story of the United States' diplomatic effort to save Edith Cavell.

step toward putting the nation on a full war footing today by deciding to group all exporters and importers into controlled syndicates.

And, in Palestine, emphasizing again the close co-operation between Britain and France and their non-belligerent ally, Turkey, General Maxime Weygand and Lieutenant General Sir Archibald P. Wavell, heads respectively of the French and British Near East forces, met for a talk understood to be connected with the present session of Turkey's supreme war council, which continued.

Under today's decision all import and export prices will be controlled by government order. The syndicates are to be charged with responsibility for accumulating stocks of raw materials and manufactured products to assure adequate supplies for national defense and the civilian population's wartime needs.

Admiral Flies.

In Stockholm the newspaper Aftonbladet reported that Admiral Nikolai Kuznetsov, Soviet naval commissar, had flown to Murmansk to inspect the Russian Arctic fleet after reports that British warships were off Finland's Arctic shore—which Russian forces occupied early in the Russian-Finnish conflict. No confirmation of this came from Moscow.

To the east is the important Russian port of Murmansk and the Kremlin was reported concerned over reports that the British might try to interfere with Russian-German trade through Murmansk.

A Baku newspaper received here today told of the decreeing of a series of test blackouts in Baku, whence a pipeline crosses the southernmost extremity of the Soviet Union to deliver oil to the Black sea port of Batum.

Home-Made Sub Damaged at Sea

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 22.—

(P)—A small, home-made submarine was damaged during a trial run off Miami Beach today, but its owner reached shore safely.

Its inventor, Barney Connett, went out for a few hours of picture-taking through the glass bottom of the craft. When he did not return, spectators arranged for a coast guard patrol boat to search near-by waters.

While the search was in progress, Connett called from a spot several miles up the beach to say that his strange craft was on a sand bar and that he was safe.

POLITICO PUBLICITY RAPPED AT ATHENS

Lloyds of London does not think much of the western front as a danger point.

A photographer going up to the Maginot line to take pictures can be insured for $10,000 for the relatively small premium of $50 a month, Dorman said. But if he goes on a convoy boat, which might be sunk by a submarine, it costs three times that. If he accompanies a traveler on a mine-sweeping expedition, it costs $500 to cover his $10,000 policy, and if he is working on the Finnish front, exposed to the double danger of bullets and terrific cold, the premium is $1,500 a month for a $10,000 policy.

Western Front Inactivity.
The inactivity on the western front, he said, is causing problems of discipline to grow more acute. "Soldiers will endure mud and hunger and cold in open trenches if they have some fighting to do, without kicking much," he declared.

"But the inactivity on the western front, even in the comparative luxury of the Maginot line, is causing them to grumble," he declared.

In an effort to keep the soldiers happy, he said, the French government is giving long leaves to married men who want to go home and see the wife and kids awhile if they aren't to be called upon to repel a German onslaught.

No Frenzied Hatred.
If you hear the word "Hitler" or "Boche" in London, he said, it is probably an American speaking. The British have settled down to a quiet acceptance of the war and there is no frenzied hatred in their attitude. They are quietly determined that Hitler shall not prevail, but they don't go wild with martial ardor when soldiers march through the streets.

Censorship of news pictures out of England and France, and the difficulty of getting good pictures anywhere on the far-flung battle

Georgia Newspaper People Talk Shop in Athens

fronts has worked great hardship on the news picture services, and has cost them much money.

Back in the days when the world was wondering where the German liner Bremen had found safe harbor a rumor that a sailor in Rotterdam had an exclusive picture of the Bremen in the Russian port of Murmansk set the picture agencies of the whole world in a frantic race to get it.

Rival Bids $250.
His agency bid $150 and was beaten by a rival agency which got the picture for $250.

That caused him much unhappiness, until it was found, on radioing the picture across, that it had been made by his own service when the Bremen lay snugly in New York harbor.

The sailor had bought it for a dollar.

Mr. Dorman, who is general manager of Acme News Pictures, Inc., was one of the first newspapermen to interview Hitler, and he still owes him $1,500 for the interview.

It was in the early days of the National Socialist party when the Fuehrer was on his way to power. Needing money badly for his party, Hitler asked $1,500 for the interview.

Gypped Hitler.
Dorman logically asked what he would get for his $1,500, if he could get authority from NEA service to pay that much for it.

Hitler, through an interpreter, asked what he wanted to know.

Dorman asked a question. Hitler answered it, to the interpreter, Dorman listening.

"Yah, he will answer dot," said the interpreter.

Dorman asked another question. Hitler answered it. And another, and another, stowing away Hitler's answers in his mind, soon he had the story he wanted.

Then he excused himself, presumably to cable his office for the $1,500. Instead he lit out for the Dutch border, filed the story and forgot about the money.

Doesn't Return.
He hasn't been back to Germany since. He is afraid Der Fuehrer's memory might be too long.

Abit Nix, Athens, talking at a luncheon session, told the group why he had never run for governor since his defeat by Eugene Talmadge in 1932. He illustrated by a story.

"In Miami last winter I saw a man strolling on Biscayne boulevard with the prettiest greyhound I ever saw on a leash.

"I stopped and told him: 'That's the most beautiful dog I ever saw. Why don't you take him out to the dog tracks and let him run in a race?'

"He told me: 'Bunch of Hat.'

"Mister, I took that dog out to the tracks once and I let him run after that mechanical rabbit. He caught that rabbit. He found out it was just a bunch of hat, after all, and he never would run again."

"That's my answer. I didn't catch the rabbit when I ran, but I've found out since it's just a bunch of hat."

"The people elect a man to office. They like him. They like his program. Then they start tearing him down and by the time he goes into his second term everybody is cursing him. Everything he does is wrong."

"We older folks will always be like that. We are too set in our ways to change. But the newspapers ought to take over the job of educating the young folks to give their elected officers a better break. The newspapers should try to educate the people to vote on the true issues, not on personalities, and not on trumped up issues that are meaningless."

"Was Against It."
"I saw a state representative elected once because he stumped his county attacking the League of Nations. The League of Nations didn't mean a thing to his constituents but he won anyhow because he was against it."

"The newspapers should help the people to understand what the real issues facing them are, and should try to hold the office-seeker to those issues."

Mr. Nix spoke at a luncheon session at which Frank Kempton, publisher of the Fulton County Daily Report, was host to the institute.

Other sessions during the day were devoted to considerations of fundamental newspaper problems.

At a morning round-table at which Tyus Butler, assistant professor of journalism in the Henry W. Grady school, presided, "Stimulating Advertising and Circulation" was discussed.

Discuss Advertising.
Those taking part were E. A. Burch, of the Dalton Citizen; Rush Burton, of the Lavonia Times; J. B. Chism, of the Pelham Journal; Stewart Gelders, of the Milledgeville Times; Charles Hardy, of the Gainesville News; Edmund Hughes, of the Cobb County Times; and R. E. L. Majors, of the Claxton Enterprise.

At an afternoon round-table session Otis Brumby presided at a discussion of "The Community Press." Leading the discussion were Buford Boone, of the Macon Telegraph; Quimby Melton, of the Griffin News; Louie L. Morris, of the Hartwell Sun; Mrs. Virginia Polhill Price, of the Louisville News and Farmer; and Charles L. Reynolds, of the Washington News-Reporter.

"Legislation Affecting Georgia Newspapers" was the subject of an evening discussion led by James C. Seymour, of Emory University.

Athens Editor Amazes Institute, Smokes Cigar, Cigaret Together

'Uncle Tom' Reed Flustered, Fails to Recall Immediately Name of Man He Had Met Before; Newcomers Attend Press Meeting.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 22.—Hugh Rowe, editor of the Athens Banner-Herald, boasts one accomplishment which never ceases to amaze his friends of the fourth estate. He smokes a cigar and a cigarette at the same time, puffing first upon one and then the other, and holding both between the fingers of one hand.

"He takes a pull on the cigar and then uses the cigarette as a chaser," commented Louie Morris, who in the hotel lobby last night made a long study of Mr. Rowe's technique.

Many outside the field of journalism attend press institute sessions each year. Among them are Miss Moira Michael, the "Poppy Lady"; Dr. R. H. Fike, of Atlanta, who comes along just to be with old friends, and Paul Warwick, of the Georgia Power Company.

Newcomer this year is Duncan Price, of Norfolk, who is the public relations man for the chain stores.

For the first time in history, T. W. Reed, patriarchal registrar of the university, couldn't at once recall the name of a man he had met before.

For a split second he couldn't recall the first name of Ralph Jones, associate editor of The Constitution. He knew he was a Jones but he didn't know which one.

Mr. Reed, who prides himself on never forgetting a name or a face, including the thousands of students he has met, was greatly flustered about it for a second, until he remembered.

The Coleman boys, Leodel, or "Eagle," and Jim, who run the Bulloch Herald at Statesboro, had some old-timers at the institute guessing. Though not twins, they look so much alike they can hardly be told apart.

They represented one of the younger papers at the institute, the Herald having been formed only three years ago.

Henry Nevins, of Dalton, has a formula for reducing that he hesitates to recommend to his friends. He was sick for 12 days and lost 12 pounds.

"I needed to lose the weight, but I'd rather lose it some other way," he said.

Frank Kempton, editor of the Fulton County Daily Report, the "Bible," according to Abit Nix, of all Georgia lawyers, was receiving the congratulations of the institute.

His paper, founded by his father, James Kempton, in 1890, this year is celebrating its 50th anniversary. Unfortunately, says Mr. Kempton, business is terrible.

Stiles Martin, editor of the Market Bulletin and one-time Constitution state news editor, got his picture in the paper the other day and is now being told on all sides that he looks exactly like Paul V. McNutt.

PAJALA BOMBING MAY FORCE WAR UPON SCANDINAVIA

Might Decide to Fight Reds Now, Rather Than to Await Later Strife.

By DEWITT MACKENZIE,
Associated Press Staff Writer.
Whatever may be Moscow's explanation of the Russian bombing of the Swedish village of Pajala, the Scandinavian public reaction is bound to be the same—that this is a grim warning to Sweden and Norway to keep hands off the Red invasion of Finland.

One would not expect, however, that this terrible incident would have a restraining influence on the average citizen of either Sweden or Norway. Indeed, it is quite likely to have just the opposite effect on these proud peoples.

Opinion Inflamed.
From the standpoint of the Swedish government the bombing is a real misfortune, since it comes at a moment when public opinion is divided and inflamed over the question of whether the country should abandon its neutrality and go to the aid of the Finns. Pressure from the people for a change of government policy has been very heavy.

In the long run the bombing may be the thing which will draw Sweden and Norway into the Russo-Finnish war as partners with the Anglo-French Allies.

If the European crisis involved merely the argument between Germany and the Anglo-French brotherhood, then the Scandinavian states might hope to keep clear of it, as they did in the World War. But Russia's westward drive has entirely altered the picture.

Both Sweden and Norway have made it clear that they regard their security as menaced by Communist Russia. Their whole inclination is to rush to the aid of their neighbor and sweep the Red flood back behind its own banks once more. The reason they haven't done this is because of Nazi threats to take action against them if they abandon neutrality.

Now or Later.
Therefore the Scandinavian countries would seem to be up against the unhappy position of having to decide whether it would be more advantageous all round to get into the fight now, or whether it is better to delay.

Should Norway and Sweden join Finland in war against Russia, this would not automatically

FHA INSURANCE ASKED FOR LOANS ON CROPS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(P)—
Senator Andrews, Democrat, Florida, today introduced a bill to permit government insurance of private loans for protection of crops against unfavorable weather.

Presumably inspired by the recent freeze in Florida's fruit and vegetable areas, the measure would amend the national housing act to authorize FHA insurance up to 20 per cent of such loans.
The amendment also would extend the FHA's authority to make loans for irrigation, drainage, and wells for use in connection with crops which have an established commercial market. In both cases, the insurance could be granted only on loans not in excess of

NIGHT COUGHING CAN OFTEN BE PREVENTED

Your child's coughing at night—caused by throat "tickle" or irritation, mouth breathing, or a cold—can often be prevented by rubbing his throat and chest with plenty of Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. VapoRub's swift poulticeand-vapor action loosens phlegm, relieves irritation, clears air passages, tends to stop mouth breathing. This helps him relax into healing sleep.

KIRKWOOD ASSURED OF NEW FIRE STATION

Residents of Kirkwood last night were assured of a new fire station by three members of city council, who spoke at a meeting of the Kirkwood Civic Club.

A lot at 2007 Howard street already has been secured for the proposed station, Councilman E. A. Minor told the 200 citizens who attended the meeting.

then what

DOCTORS stress remaining in bed until the body temperature is normal. Sound advice.

You know how weak you feel after a cold. Colds play havoc in weakening the body. The story is well told in the blood picture. It is important to build back body strength right away to carry the load of work, worries and loss of sleep. A weakened body may be more susceptible to relapse or long drawn out recovery.

So reason sensibly and take the choice of millions by immediately starting on a course of S.S.S. Tonic—taken three times a day immediately before meals. In the absence of a focal infection or organic disease, you should note improvement in the way you feel and look within the first 10 days. The confidence of millions over many years is the best testimonial of this product.

An experience with S.S.S. Tonic will cause you to say to your friends, S.S.S. made me "feel and look like myself again."

PNEUMONIA, FLU
DECREASE IN STATE

Both Diseases Show Increase Over This Time Last Year.

Cases of influenza and pneumonia are dropping off in Georgia, reports of the State Department of Public Health showed yesterday.

The summary pointed out that for the week ending February 3 there were 1,217 cases of influenza reported to the department and 171 cases of pneumonia. For the week ending February 10 there were 742 cases of influenza and 157 cases of pneumonia.

Although the diseases did not reach epidemic proportions, both increased over the corresponding week in 1939, when there were 115 cases of influenza and 96 cases of pneumonia reported.

DOCTORS DISCOVER
FLU-PROOF NOSES

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP)—A new source of immunity to epidemic influenza has been discovered in human noses at the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

The discovery was announced today by Dr. Thomas Francis Jr., in Science, the official journal of American scientists. The protective material comes from nasal secretions but has not been identified further. Some people have it and others don't. The discovery explains in part why some persons escape during flu epidemics.

Three Wives and in Trouble

The eternal triangle rattled loudly in Seattle, Wash., yesterday when Floyd C. Trimble, 23, and Mrs. Norma Trimble, 20, his first wife, were questioned after a third wife accused him of marrying her without benefit of two previous divorces.

Jennie Trimble, wife No. 2, told the divorce judge she would step out of Floyd's life when the case is settled.

Mrs. Maxine Trimble, 18, Trimble's third wife, said she will seek an annulment of their marriage. It's a mix-up.

'BUG' SQUAD SEIZES
TWO ON SUSPICION

J. B. King, Ex-Policeman, and Woman Arrested as Drive Continues.

J. B. King, former city policeman, who was indicted in 1937 following a grand jury investigation into racketeering, and a woman listed as Mrs. J. M. Harris were arrested on charges of "suspicion, hold for investigation" yesterday in separate actions by the Atlanta police lottery squad.

The arrest of the woman and King, who resigned from the department following his indictment and never came to trial, brought to 20 the total of arrests by the "bug" squad in the past few days and came after the Fulton grand jury announced it will continue its investigation of lotteries at a routine session today.

Drive Ordered. Prior to the two arrests, Lieutenant P. E. Jones, who is directing activities of the "bug" squad, instructed his men to "clean out every underworld hideout in the city."

King and Mrs. Harris posted $1,000 bonds each.

More than a score of indictments charging lottery violations have been drawn by the solicitor's office for action by the grand jury. Twelve lottery indictments were returned by the jury Tuesday.

Boykin Gathers Data. Meanwhile, Solicitor General John A. Boykin prepared the groundwork for a sweeping probe by the incoming grand jury.

Members of Boykin's staff have been gathering data on the "bug" for the past two months and once the new jury is sworn in he plans to submit this to them for a far-reaching investigation aimed specifically at the "higher ups."

Included in the indictments are two charging George Muckle, a Negro, and Slim Crowder, a white man, with speeding. Police say Muckle and Crowder were engaged in high-speed chases with law enforcement officers last Friday.

GENE BUCK FACES
EXTORTION CHARGE

Arrest Followed Dispute With Radio Stations Over Music Fees.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 22.—(AP) Gene Buck, noted author and president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, was arrested at a resort hotel today on a Montana warrant charging attempted extortion.

His arrest is the outgrowth of a dispute at Missoula, Mont., over a demand by ASCAP that certain radio stations pay fees for the use of music in the organization claims to own or control.

Buck, released under $10,000 bond, said after a telephone conversation with his attorneys in Los Angeles that he would fight extradition.

At Missoula, Governor Roy Ayers, of Montana, said he would conduct a hearing tomorrow to determine whether to issue a requisition for the extradition. In addition to the attempted extortion charge, a felony, Buck also is accused of attempting to obtain money under false pretenses and conspiracy to extort, both misdemeanors.

$14 From Albany
Blown by Storm
To Cochran Area

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

COCHRAN, Ga., Feb. 22.—A roll of shredded bills amounting to $14 was found Monday, five miles from Cochran, by three boys who were rabbit hunting. It is believed the money was blown from Albany by the same wind that caused the tornado there. W. L. Arvin and Arley Bates brought the money to Cochran for a bank to redeem it for bills that could be spent. The currency was sent to Washington.

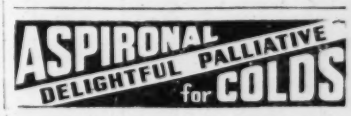

Other evidences of the Albany tornado found in the same location were a letter discovered by W. D. McSmith, addressed to J. C. Few in Albany, and a canceled bus ticket found by K. H. Holland.

Hull Reports 'Spirit of Optimism'
For Extension of Trade Program

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Secretary Hull conferred privately late today with house leaders and Democratic members of the ways and means committee and said he found "a spirit of optimism" among them regarding chances for a three-year extension of his reciprocal trade program.

Chairman Doughton, Democrat, North Carolina, said the meeting, on the eve of a scheduled house vote on the proposed extension, was devoted to a general canvass of the situation.

Twenty-five varieties of winter wheat were sown in one plot in Russia.

BUYS BACK BUSINESS

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Weary of the idleness he'd looked forward to for years, John J. Gibbins, at 79, bought back his painting business today and happily prepared to work for the remainder of his life. He sold out his business 13 years ago and retired to Florida.

The ceremony was performed simply by License Supervisor Carl Holmer Jr., in his office in the courthouse. She was released shortly afterwards.

VOTERS STAND PAT AGAINST FIRE STATION

SWANSEA, Ill., Feb. 22.—(AP)—The new fire engine will be an "orphan" unless the city fathers can provide it a home soon.

Contrary to the wishes of citizens who defeated a $10,000 bond issue to establish a fire department, the council ordered a pump for delivery March 1. Then it re-asked voters to approve a fire station. They defeated it a second time.

'Raffles' Trapped Again, This Time By R. L. Mathis, Downtown Barber

Spotting of Elusive Figure Brings $15 Reward to Finder; Constitution Offers Similar Prize Today, in Connection With Loew's Grand Film.

A barber trapped "Raffles" along Peachtree street, and earned the equivalent of several haircuts, a number of shaves, and a few tonics and massages.

The barber, R. L. Mathis, who works in a downtown hotel and lives at 33 Georgia avenue, S. E., was doubly prepared. He had two copies of The Constitution in his hand—yesterday's and Wednesday's.

He stepped up to Raffles and recited the only formula that Raffles recognizes:

"You are Mr. Raffles, of The Atlanta Constitution and Loew's theater. I am claiming the reward for your capture."

Raffles agreed: "Well, you got me."

So, 10 minutes later in The Constitution office, Mr. Mathis was paid the $15, an easy pickup during his lunch hour.

Some other alert Atlanta has the chance to enrich himself by $15 today by following the plan Mr. Mathis used.

When you recognize Raffles, whose picture has been printed three times in this newspaper this week, step up without hesitation and recite, without missing a word, the formula that Mr. Mathis recited.

Raffles is in town as an added attraction to Samuel Goldwyn's latest production, "Raffles," starring David Niven and Olivia DeHavilland, which opened last night at Loew's theater, the first picture selected to succeed "Gone With the Wind."

The mystery man will be along Peachtree street today, inviting someone else to detect him and claim the $15 reward. As soon as you see him, walk right up with the copy of this morning's Constitution in your hand and recite the proper formula.

He will leave his hotel today around noon, walk along Peachtree street again over to Loew's theater, where he will loiter for several minutes, then will move along Peachtree street, to Alabama street, to Broad, and then to The Constitution office.

If he is not detected today, the $15 will be saved and $30 will be given to the person who captures him tomorrow.

'MAN FROM DAKOTA' AT RHODES TODAY

Cast Includes Wallace Beery, John Howard.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's answer to the northern critics of "Gone With the Wind," who objected to Yankees being made to look like such brutes, is found in "The Man From Dakota," which opens today at the Rhodes theater, painting a picture of mistreatment by the southern officers.

In the cast are Wallace Beery, as a hardboiled Yankee sergeant who would stoop to anything to get enough food for himself; John Howard as one of "Abe Lincoln's volunteer officers," and Dolores Del Rio, in a comeback, as a Russian who kills a Confederate officer and escapes with Howard and Beery.

The film is billed as comedy, and is said to include many exciting moments.

Brave Hearts Wear Order of the Purple Heart

While the nation yesterday celebrated the birthday of George Washington, some of Atlanta's World War heroes received the decoration of the Purple Heart—an honor which Washington created. The ceremonies took place at Fort McPherson. General Robert O. Van Horn is pinning a medal on Howard Fling. To the right of Fling is J. P. (Pat) Kelly. At the extreme left is Adjutant General John E. Stoddard.

44 Heroes of World War Decorated With Purple Heart

Order Founded by George Washington Honors Members of A. E. F. at Fort McPherson Ceremonies; First Time Mass Presentation Held There.

By LUKE GREENE.

Through the misting snow the spirit of George Washington, the soldier, must have watched proudly yesterday at Fort McPherson as 44 heroes of the World War were decorated with the Purple Heart—a military honor which General Washington himself originated.

The army put on a real show for those men who fought for their country two decades ago. The bands played. Soldiers passed in review. It was the first time that a mass presentation of the Purple Heart had taken place at Fort McPherson.

Commanding General Robert O. Van Horn pinned the medals on the men. At his side was Adjutant General John E. Stoddard. Actually 46 men received the Purple Heart honor. Two were absent. They were Scott Candler, DeKalb county commissioner, and L. O. Moseley.

They stood in one long line—erect, with chests out and heads up. It was a memorable day for them. They were trying their best to be the soldiers they were in 1917 and 1918. No one seemed to notice their bulging waist lines or their thinning hair.

But when they walked away, you couldn't overlook the fact that a few limped. One hobbled along on a crutch, mute evidence of what the war had done to him. Others had battle injuries that were more easily concealed. The war had taken its toll, but every one was a hero to those grouped along the sidelines watching the ceremonies.

Wives looked on excitedly as their husbands received their awards. Children jumped up and down and pointed to "Daddy." Out there "Daddy" was reliving some of the experiences that won him the distinction of being in the Order of the Purple Heart.

"Bill" Mason, Constitution photographer, was among the group of heroes. But he didn't stand in line with the others. He was busy with his camera, giving his "buddies" the break.

Standing there in the misting snow and biting cold one thought of that famous Battle of Valley Forge. It was after that historic revolutionary battle that General Washington created the Purple Heart decoration. He presented it to his men for their meritorious service at Valley Forge.

For this reason holders of the Purple Heart have two special days in each year which they are supposed to devote to advancing the principles of Americanism and patriotism for which George Washington stood. One is August 7, 1782—the day he originated the Purple Heart—and the other is his birthday, which was yesterday.

Military Show.

The ceremonies began with formation of the second battalion under command of Captain G. L. Phipps. The band played the Star-Spangled Banner. The commanding general presented the medals. The second battalion then passed in review.

As the last line of soldiers passed the reviewing officers and the music of the band faded in the distance, an airplane roared overhead. It was partly hidden by the fleecy clouds. But no bombs were dropped. There was no scurrying to air-raid shelters. It seemed especially significant that, despite all of this military demonstration, this country was at peace.

Following is a list of the men receiving the Purple Heart decoration:

Fred Barrow, Howard F. Aylor, Fred C. Becker, Charles P. Bell, Lucius S. Bellinger, Sylvester M. Berrong, Scott Candler, Ashley W. Carter, John C. Carter, Fred J. Cliff, Otis R. Davis, Howard S. Fling, R. F. Floyd, James A. Greene, Henry D. Hancock, Lewis Hazard, George W. Himelright, J. "Pat" Kelly, Fred H. Lightsey, Robert L. Lowe, William W. Mason, Irvin McPherson, Fabian W. Minton, William M. Mizell, Joseph L. Morris, Thomas M. Wood, Lasse O. Moseley, George B. Murdock, Albert M. Nabers, George H. Norris, Samuel M. Owen, James R. Parham, Ivan F. Parrington, Gladstone Pitt, Dewey Price, John P. Scarborough, James T. Shaw, Eugene L. Stewart, Preston M. Sumner, William R. Waldrep, Joe F. Watkins, Glenn J. Winbush, Thomas Spencer, G. F. McDonald, John S. Wright, and Lloyd Bettis.

ATLANTANS TO FORM RAINBOW CLUB.

Eight Atlantans who served in France with the Rainbow division and who personally knew Father Duffy, the doughboys' priest, met last night to lay plans for the formation of a Rainbow Club in Atlanta.

These men were guests of the Fox theater at the organization dinner. The story of the Rainbow division, Father Duffy, and "Wild Bill" Donovan is told in the motion picture, "The Fighting 69th," which opens today at the Fox.

While these men see each other at least once a week, last night was the first time all have gotten together and had an "old fashioned chin fest" about war experiences. And the stories they told check the film for authenticity.

Present for the organization meeting, which was prompted by the film, were Harry Phillips, 167th infantry; George H. Norris, 151st machine gun; John P. Scarborough, 151st machine gun; Henry Hancock, 167th infantry; H. S. Cling, 167th infantry; Joe F. Watkins, 151st machine gun; T. W. Childs, 151st machine gun; F. J. Cliff.

All men had been decorated with the Purple Heart badge earlier in the day at Fort McPherson.

Long Dynasty Topped, Uncle Sam Will Train Siege Guns Elsewhere

Another Situation, Similar to Louisiana's, Will Be Next, Says Federal Prosecutor, Keeping Mum on Name of State.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 22.—(P) Assistant Attorney General O. John Rogge, who "broke" the Louisiana scandals cases ending in disaster for the Huey P. Long dictatorship this week, is preparing to turn the federal siege guns of investigation and prosecution upon another similar situation elsewhere.

The towering director of the criminal division of the Department of Justice revealed this here tonight together with announcement of preparation of federal plans for uniformity of federal investigation and jurisprudence under guidance of his department in Washington.

"Through this plan I hope to put as big a dent as I can in the pipe line that flows graft into the pockets of public officials," Rogge asserted on his return from Alexandria, La., where he had argued motions in the case of former Governor Richard W. Leche, under indictment for alleged mail fraud there.

"When I finish with the Louisiana investigation I have a place in mind to carry out similar investigations, but I do not care to reveal it now," Rogge said in an interview. "The situation there is the same as it was in Louisiana. I don't expect to get to it before April."

Rogge's statement closely paralleled that of former Attorney General Frank Murphy, who on a visit here just before the present scandals broke last June announced federal determination to break up "graft and corruption" on the part of local, city and state officials throughout the nation.

by city and county in 1938. It is a story of the helpless relief victim who, through no fault of his own, was forced to change horses in the middle of the stream and is being almost drowned before he can reach shore.

In a word it is the story of what happened to the business of caring for the indigent when, on January 1, 1939, the city of Atlanta ceased helping in the public welfare business and turned it over to the Fulton county commissioners.

Here are the facts:

During 1938 a tax of one mill was levied for relief purposes against the assessed valuation of all property in the city of Atlanta. After 30 per cent of the amount raised had been deducted, according to law, for school purposes, $221,820 actually was turned over to the county welfare department by the city.

$596,520 Spent in 1938.

In the same year Fulton county gave to its county welfare department $375,000.

The combined amount devoted by city and county to welfare work in 1938 was the sum of these two amounts, or $971,520.

Here, in 1938, were two relief horses out in the middle of the stream. The idea was advanced that if the burden of relief could be taken off the back of the bay horse and put on the back of the white horse, out there where the current of distress was running strong, both horses could make shore. It apparently was plausible.

Simply take the one mill tax levied from the city of Atlanta and put it on Fulton county, centralize the financing of relief, and put more money into the actual needs of people asking for food, clothes and shelter.

The suffering relief victim didn't mind. He didn't test the wind of the Fulton county horse any more than he had looked at the teeth of the Atlanta horse. So when someone pulled the two horses together in the middle of the stream, the hungry man tried to get off the one and onto the other.

That's where he is today, because the financially spavined and winded Fulton county horse isn't carrying him to shore and he can't get back on the Atlanta horse.

Public Informer.

Through 1939, the public was under the impression the one mill had been shifted from the Atlanta tax rate and taken over by Fulton county in its tax rate.

If the reader will look at the 1938 Fulton county tax records, he will find the grand total of his county tax rate fixed at 12.5 mills. If he looks at the 1939 Fulton county tax record he will find the grand total of his county tax rate fixed at 13.5 mills. There, he believes, is the shift of the one mill from the city tax to the county tax for relief purposes. That should prove for him that the one mill intended for relief purposes actually went for relief.

But the reader doesn't have the opportunity to make an analysis of these tax matters. He takes for granted that the money will be spent correctly, even though he sometimes protests about increased taxes.

A newspaper man sent out to find the facts has only one place to get them. That is from the records. Having looked at the records, he can put them side by side and let them tell their own story.

Here is the story of relief taxes in mills. It is told first in mills, because the grand jury discusses mills when it fixes the amount which the county commission can levy for relief. It is in mills which the county commissioners discuss when they explain what is being spent on relief. Later these mills will be converted into dollars to show that $144,000 supposed to go for relief never got there.

In 1939, as in 1938, there were two classifications on the county books under which expenditures for the indigent never were made.

Mills levied in tax rate in 1938	Mills levied in tax rate in 1939
.760	2.221
2.070	2.392

To pay expenses incurred for supporting poor of the county and to repay temporary loans for said purpose

To provide for payment of old age assistance to aged persons in need, for payment of assistance to the needy blind and dependent children, for other benefits, and to repay temporary loans for said purposes

Total for welfare

The simplest arithmetic shows the difference in the total spent for welfare in 1939 over 1938 is not one mill, but only .322 mills, or not quite a third of a mill.

But the tax bills of the reader reflect an increase of one mill in 1939 over 1938. There is slightly more than two-thirds of a mill unaccounted for, and the newspaperman has only one place to find it.

It is distributed in mills by the county commissioners for all other purposes for which they spend the taxpayers' money except relief. Chiefly these are for public works expenditures, parks, playgrounds, county police and all the functions of the county except feeding the starving 2,600 or more families who seek assistance from the Fulton county welfare board.

The Fulton county records show that mills levied for all purposes except for indigents in 1938 were 10.430, and in 1939 were 11.103. Simple subtraction supplies the difference of .673 mills.

Another Comparison.

Then make this comparison between 1938 and 1939:

1938	1939	Increase
Total mills spent for county welfare	2.070	2.392
Total mills spent for other purposes	10.430	11.108
The mills reflected in your tax bill	12.500	13.500

All of which explains what happened to the mills when the man got off the city relief horse and tried to get onto the county relief horse in the middle of the stream.

The hungry man had to share his food. For the benefit of the reader who doesn't understand mills because he doesn't pay his taxes in mills but pays them in hard-earned dollars, the story can be more pointedly told in a statement of the dollars spent.

To pay expenses incurred for supporting poor of the county, and to repay temporary loans for said purpose	$213,562.76
To provide for payment of old age assistance to aged persons in need, for payment of assistance to the needy blind and to dependent children and other benefits, and to repay temporary loans for said purposes	$627,319.85
Total for welfare	$840,882.61

The total increase is $93,720.48. But of this only $77,750 went to the county welfare department for actual relief. The remainder went to other general welfare purposes which are explained at the end of the article. This $93,720.48 is the amount an increase of .322 mills in the tax rate produced.

1938	1939
Above total for welfare	$581,677.52
To pay county expenses including public works, parks and playgrounds, county police, and all other purposes except care of the indigent	$2,930,867.93
Total amount raised for all purposes	$3,512,545.45

The increase which went to other purposes than welfare is $204,709.13.

So out of a county increase of one mill which was supposed to raise at least $221,820 for county relief work, when the city dropped the job at the end of 1938, only $93,720.48 mentioned above went to the welfare department—$144,070 less than it got from the city in 1938.

Funds Spent Elsewhere.

But the one mill placed on county assessed property as well as on city assessed property returned $208,429.61. Of this the $73,720.48 mentioned above went to the welfare purposes. The county commissioners retained the remaining $204,709.13 to spend on

1938	1939	Increase	Decrease
Spent on Grady Hospital	$87,200.00	none	none
Spent on Battle Hill	$2,497.81	$22,750.00	$19,584.27
Spent on Steiner Clinic	$6,750.00	none	none
Spent on Good S. Clinic	$3,375.00	none	none
Spent on Scottish Rite Hos.	$5,000.00	none	none
Given to private agencies	$9,150.00	none	none
Spent on Almshouse	$36,368.58	$32,967.52	$3,401.06
Spent for gro's for paupers	$2,002.50	$1,575.00	$427.50
Spent for burial of paupers	$1,195.00	none	$430.00
Totals	$203,538.29	$218,814.60	$19,584.27

The net increase, other than direct welfare, was $15,275.71.

The question arises, is it reasonable to ask if diverting money intended to buy food for starving and undernourished men, women and children is causing more tuberculosis and not only increasing the county's share for operating Battle Hill Sanitarium, but destroying, perhaps beyond repair, the health of its citizens?

Two successive grand juries and the county commission alone are able to supply the answer.

GRAND JURY NAMES DRAWN BY DORSEY

March-April Panel Will Be Picked From 45 Citizens Selected.

With the present county grand jury busily engaged in preparing its presentations for return March 1, Judge Hugh M. Dorsey yesterday drew the names of 45 more citizens from which the March-April grand jury will be selected.

Included in the list is the name of many prominent business executives. From this list, a full panel of 23 grand jurors will be chosen. The March-April grand jury, in addition to any special investigations it deems necessary, will be called upon to investigate and report on all governmental functions. This is required by law for the March-April and September-October organizations.

Indications are that the new jury will be called upon to continue the lottery probe and to recommend a county relief tax of three mills.

The present jury is expected to make a recommendation on the size of the relief tax. The present levy is 2 1-4 mills. Members of the county board of public welfare are seeking a three-mill levy.

Praise Continues To Grow For Paper's Relief Articles

The Constitution Especially Lauded Because of Series of News Stories by Betty Mathis About Poverty-Stricken Family Here.

Atlantans yesterday continued to praise editorials and news articles carried by The Atlanta Constitution concerning the Fulton county relief problem. They referred especially to the series of news stories by Betty Mathis about the poverty-stricken family of Eva and Fred, who are symbolic of thousands of other families seeking food in Fulton county.

Excerpts from the messages follow:

Miss Ruth McMillan, 776 Juniper street, N. E.—"May I take this opportunity to tell you what I consider the great educational value of the articles by Betty Mathis. I hope you will see fit to continue this educational work to awaken our citizens to their responsibility."

Created a Sensation.

Miss E. Page Tucker, 571 Orme circle, N. E., supervisor at the Fulton board of public welfare—"It (Mr. Hines' story) has certainly created a sensation not only among us much-beated social workers, but among that group of the general public who have been honestly concerned about the situation and have wanted to know what was what."

Mrs. R. S. Pringle, 804 Oakdale road, N. E.—"I have been tremendously interested in the way The Constitution brought to the public mind the case of 'Eva.' Are we, who are more privileged, discharging our Christian obligation to our fellow citizens if we sit still, smug in our own security and see this want for immediate relief unremedied, and to go deeper, refuse to see to it that the children of the next generation aren't fully prepared to meet future emergencies?"

W. M. Banta, superintendent Atlanta Goodwill Industries, Inc.—"I have read these articles with a great deal of interest and hope they will continue until the general public is aroused to the community's responsibility."

Congratulates Constitution.

H. H. Boller, director research and guidance department, Atlanta public schools—"I wish to congratulate The Constitution on the fine series of articles. In view of the importance of this problem, it seems to me that it would be well for The Constitution to continue this series in one form or another."

Miss Bonnie Barnard Coppedge—"Congratulations on the splendid information you are giving. I hope nothing will be done to curtail this work. I know that the people of Atlanta are justly grateful for the way you have sponsored this just cause."

William G. McRae, attorney—"Your reporter, Betty Mathis, has rendered a distinct public service. A federal gross income tax on all incomes over $3,000 at the rate of 2 per cent should be levied and the proceeds used as a revolving fund to finance all forms of public assistance. The funds so raised would be ample to do the job right, and would provide an American standard of living rather than a pauper dole. Local governments can not deal with such an enormous undertaking."

CONFERENCE TO STUDY FOREST FIRE PROBLEM

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Ways of combating spring forest fires in the south will be the principal topic before the Southern States Forest Fire Commission tomorrow.

State conservation commissioners, industrialists, educators, and others interested in development of the south's timber resources will attend. W. A. Currie, convention chairman, said spring forest fires cost the south $10,000,000 annually.

JAMES ROOSEVELT TO ARRIVE TONIGHT

President's Son Will See Godson Whose Father Was Schoolmate.

(Picture on Opposite Page.) James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, will arrive from Washington tonight for a week-end visit with his godson, two-year-old Brumby McGehee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. McGehee, of Andrews drive.

Mr. McGehee, a former schoolmate of young Roosevelt, said the President's son, now a Hollywood motion picture producer, had expressed a desire for a quiet visit and that no formal functions would be on the schedule.

McGehee said he expected his visitor to remain in Atlanta until Monday. He will come from Washington by plane, arriving at the municipal airport at 11:25 o'clock tonight.

In Washington yesterday, en route to Philadelphia where he made a Washington birthday's address last night, young Roosevelt, who has filed suit for a divorce from his wife, Mrs. Betsy Cushing Roosevelt, said he "had no plans at all" to marry Miss Romelle Schneider, his nurse last year.

Rub the skins of potatoes with butter, cooking oil or any meat drippings before baking. This prevents the skins from bursting, softening them and adds both to the appearance and the flavor of the baked potato.

Immediately after removal from the oven, cookies should be lifted off the baking sheet with a spatula and allowed to cool on a cake cooler or wire frame.

Quick Lunch With Cheese Rarebit

Ideas From a Cook's Notebook

Carrot Pudding.

The first recipe combines grated carrots with stale bread, molasses, spices, etc. to form a perfectly delicious, inexpensive dessert. Mix together 1 cup of grated raw carrot, 1 cup of molasses, 1-4 teaspoon ground cloves, 1-3 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon baking soda, which has been sifted with 1-3 cup of flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2 cups fine stale bread crumbs, 2 tablespoons margarine or any shortening, melted, and 1 cup of seeded raisins. Turn into a greased pudding mold and steam 3-4 hours. Serve with maple or lemon sauce.

Broiled Scallops Hawaiian.

Small scallops

Bacon

Take strips of bacon about four inches long. On either end place a scallop and a well-drained spoon-size cube of pineapple. Roll both to the center. Each should be wrapped in bacon. Put two or three of these on a skewer and broil until bacon is browned and scallops done, about 6 minutes. Turn once.

Serve with broiled tomato slices and mushroom caps. Reserve syrup for use in fruit cups or fruit beverages.

Chocolate Ice Box Cake.

4 squares unsweetened chocolate
1-2 cup sugar
Dash of salt
1-4 cup hot water
4 egg yolks
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 egg whites, stiffly beaten
1 cup cream, whipped
2 dozen lady fingers
Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add sugar, salt, and water, stirring until sugar is dissolved and mixture blended. Remove from boiling water; add egg yolks, one at a time, beating thoroughly after each. Place over boiling water and cook 2 minutes, or until thickened, stirring constantly. Add vanilla and fold into egg whites. Chill. Fold in whipped cream. Line bottom and sides of mold with lady fingers. Turn chocolate mixture into mold and place remaining lady fingers on top. Chill 12 to 24 hours in refrigerator. If desired, add 1-2 cup finely cut walnut meats to chocolate mixture before turning into mold. Unmold. Serves eight.

This recipe may be molded in an 8x4-3-inch loaf pan. Line pan with waxed paper; arrange lady fingers on bottom and sides and proceed as directed.

Custard Bread Pudding.

2 cups soft bread crumbs
4 cups scalded bottled milk or 2 cups evaporated milk and cups water, scalded
4 eggs
1-3 cup granulated sugar
1-2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1-4 cup melted butter or margarine
1-4 cup strawberry jam
4 tablespoons granulated sugar

Add the bread crumbs to the scalded milk. Beat 2 eggs and 2 egg yolks slightly and add the 1-3 cup granulated sugar and salt, and mix thoroughly. Add bread-crumbs mixture, vanilla and butter, and mix well. Pour into 8 greased individual custard cups set in a pan of warm water, and bake in a moderate oven of 350 degrees F. for 45 to 50 minutes, or until a silver knife inserted in the center comes out clean. Remove from the oven, then spread the top of each with jam or jelly. Top with a meringue made as follows: Beat 2 egg whites until nearly stiff. Then add the 4 tablespoons sugar and beat until stiff. Place custard cups in a pan of cold water, and brown the custard in a slow oven of 300 degrees F. for 25 to 30 minutes. Serve hot or cold. Serves 8. To serve two make one-fourth this recipe, using 1 egg yolk for the pudding and 1 egg white for the meringue.

Cooked Salad Dressing: Beat two egg yolks with one teaspoon sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon white pepper. Melt two tablespoons butter, add two tablespoons flour and then stir in one-half cup cold milk. Continue stirring until it is thickened, then beat it into the egg yolk mixture, a little at a time. Cook for one minute, stirring constantly, remove from the fire, add one-quarter cup lemon juice or vinegar and beat in one stiffly beaten egg white. Keep in a covered jar in the refrigerator.

The simplest way to extract a small quantity of onion juice is to peel the onion down halfway, cut off a thin slice, then with a sharp knife cut many crosswise slits over the surface of the onion. Next push the back of the knife across the cut surface and let the juice drip into the food to be flavored.

Baste duck while roasting with 1-2 cup orange juice to give a delicious flavor and to make the meat more tender.

It's Smart To Know Cheese

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION
Edited by SALLY SAVER

ATLANTA, GA., FRIDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 23, 1940.

Familiar Foods Find Favor

Link sausages rank high among the "first aids" to a busy homemaker. When a quick meal is called for, sausages supply the answer to the meat question. They are versatile and fit into a meal at any time of the day. For breakfast we welcome them with griddle cakes or as an accompaniment to eggs; at lunch they might appear with a casserole of leftover vegetables, and at supper,

Sunday night snacking time or buffet they are quite effective with browned apple or pineapple rings, waffles, or around a snowy pile of hominy as shown in the picture.

Cook Them Slowly.

For best results and finest flavor sausages should not be cooked fast. They may be broiled slowly, like bacon, turned often, or they may be fried. To fry, place link sausages in a cool or cold frying pan and cover with cold water. Let water come to a slow boil, pour it off and continue cooking sausages over a moderate flame, turning often. Let the meek until they are delicately browned all over.

Sausages and Hominy.

1 pound link sausages
2 cups cooked hominy
1-4 cup melted butter or margarine
Cook sausages as directed above. Cook hominy in boiling salt water, or use canned hominy and season with melted butter or margarine. Arrange hominy in a mound on hot platter and place browned sausages around the mound. Garnish with sprigs of crisp celery.

Little link sausages may be cooked with dressing like this:
Sausages With Dressing
1 pound link sausages
2 cups bread crumbs
1 small onion, grated or finely minced
1-4 teaspoon sage
Salt
Pepper

Make dressing from bread crumbs squeezed out of cold water, with added seasoning. Place in a heavy iron skillet and completely cover the bottom with half-inch rings of unpeeled apples. Cook until the fruit is slightly browned. Grind one and a half pounds of ends or trimmings of boiled ham and mix with two eggs, one and a half cups of soft bread crumbs, two tablespoons of prepared mustard, and one tablespoon of grated onion. Spread this mixture evenly on top of fruit and pat down. Bake in a moderate oven about 40 minutes. Pour off surplus fat and turn the loaf onto a heated platter and garnish with parsley or watercress.

Upside-Down Ham Loaf.

Melt a little butter and three tablespoons of light brown sugar in a heavy iron skillet and completely cover the bottom with half-inch rings of unpeeled apples. Cook until the fruit is slightly browned. Grind one and a half pounds of ends or trimmings of boiled ham and mix with two eggs, one and a half cups of soft bread crumbs, two tablespoons of prepared mustard, and one tablespoon of grated onion. Spread this mixture evenly on top of fruit and pat down. Bake in a moderate oven about 40 minutes. Pour off surplus fat and turn the loaf onto a heated platter and garnish with parsley or watercress.

Evaporated milk will whip quickly if you heat it almost to the boiling point, then place it in the refrigerator. When very cold, whip it and it will begin to thicken at once.

The average American doesn't take his cheese seriously enough. Cheese to most of us is simply cheese, and by that designation we mean American cheese. We don't go in much for varieties; our tastes, on the whole, aren't cultivated for the sharp or unusual flavors. However, this situation is slowly changing as the cheese makers in this country are leading us toward a broadening of our taste for cheese by presenting to us interesting modifications of the more striking flavors.

Cheese Is Staple Food.

Everyone who has traveled abroad or is familiar with dietary habits of European and Asiatic people knows that cheese is a principal food in many lands. Studies of ancient races show that cheese has been made since early times, and throughout man's civilized history has continued to be a staple article of food. Most likely cheese-making came about through a need to preserve milk and the milk of several animals is used in cheese making, dependent upon the adaptability of a particular animal to a climate and living conditions in a given place. In desert places of the earth the camel's milk is used for cheese; in many parts of Europe where peasants keep goats, cheese made from goat's milk has taken many excellent forms. Here in America, where we have plenty of space and grazing lands for cattle, cheese made from cow's milk is almost the only kind of domestic cheese we know.

Large cheese companies have plants in agricultural regions, and these plants receive, for processing, immense quantities of cheese from nearby dairymen. Nearly all fresh milk which is not marketed in bottles finds its way to a canned milk or cheese factory. Thus, cheesemaking is important economically in that it takes care of surplus milk. On this page are interior views of one of these cheese factories in Atlanta. Hundreds of pounds of cheddar cheese, aged from six months to a year, comes into this plant each day from smaller country plants, to be seasoned, blended and packaged for retail store selling.

Cheese Is Valuable Food.

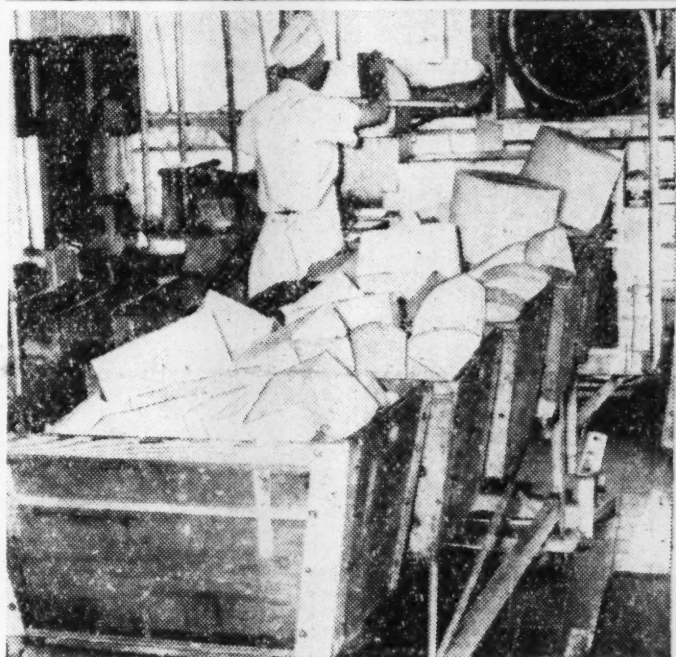

The food value of cheese is widely recognized by nutritionists, particularly if the cheese is of a variety made from whole milk. Cheese retains the calcium and other important minerals for which milk is a valued food and its proteins are of good quality. Extensive studies have proved that cheese is not hard to digest and cheese, while fresh and moist may be freely used in the diet "without physiological disturbances," quoting a United States Department of Agriculture report.

In general, cheeses may be divided into two classifications, the hard and the soft. The best known hard cheeses are: Cheddar, Edam, Cheshire, Stilton, Gruyere and Parmesan. Among the best known soft cheeses are: cream, cottage, Camembert, Brie, Limburger and the semi-soft, Roquefort. Many of the foreign cheeses are now made quite successfully in this country, but it is estimated that fully nine-tenths of all the cheese made in the United States is the familiar American variations of Cheddar. Many cheeses are packaged under special trade names and are made by mixing cheeses, by adding cream or special flavorings.

Connoisseurs Know Cheese.

It is a mark of the connoisseur to know cheeses and to serve them appropriately. You can be sure that a hostess is no beginner if she serves a tray of assorted cheese with preserved fruits and coffee for dessert! It is done in the smartest places.

In choosing cheeses for an assorted tray one should have some mild, some sharp, soft and some hard, in order to please every taste and to provide contrast in coloring and texture. Cheese in combination with other foods; as a sauce for vegetables, as a sandwich filling, in salads, with eggs, in souffles, rarebits, fondue, in omelets, cakes, cookies, breads, custards and pies, has endless possibilities as a nutritional factor and for taste appeal in the diet. Extend your use of cheese, and if you need cheese recipes write or phone Sally Saver for them.

Large blocks of Cheddar cheese, quartered or halved, are being put into a hygienic mixer to be combined with other cheeses and flavors to make a special blend.

You're Asking Me

Question: How long should meringue be cooked at 450 degrees?

Answer: I am glad this question was asked in just this way because it gives me a clue as to why there are so many cooks having trouble with meringues. Meringue should be cooked in a slow oven, never over 275 degrees, 250 is better. Too quick cooking will toughen and shrivel meringue and the result will be a leather-like surface, moist and sticky underneath. Bake the meringue on your pie 10 minutes in a 250-degree oven and it will not fall when taken out of the stove. In making meringues for desserts, those to be filled with fruits, etc., bake these in a 250-degree oven for about 30 minutes. Remember, slow ovens for good meringues!

Question: How can I be sure of the right amount of vitamins in each meal?

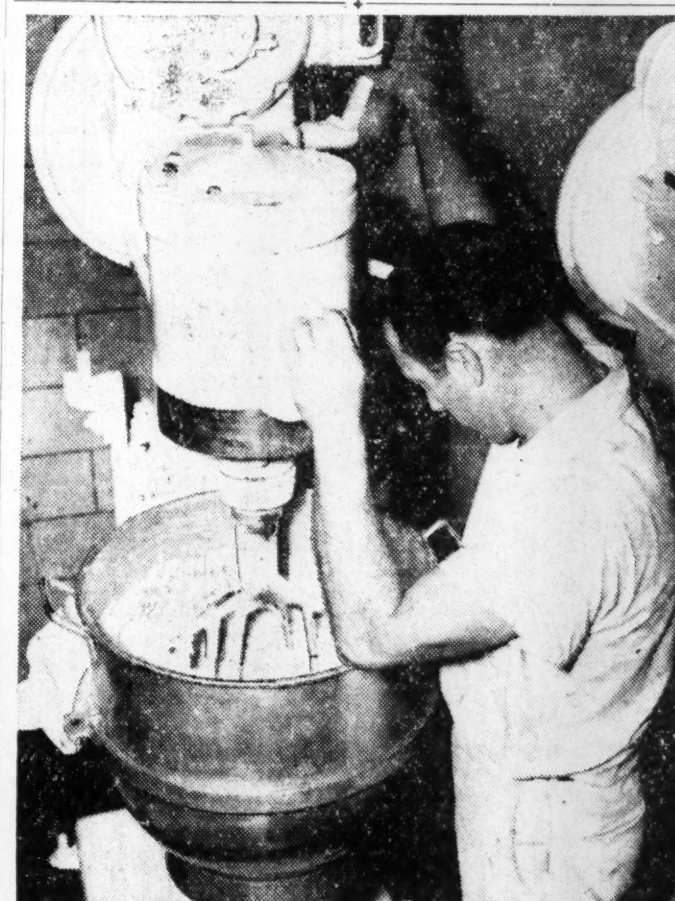

Answer: It is better to consider a whole day rather than each meal as a separate unit. Each day's food for a normal adult should include: 1 pint of milk, or more; 1 egg; a helping of two or three vegetables (at least one vegetable of the green, leafy type); a helping of at least two fruits, cooked or raw; and enough lean meats, cereals, breads and sweets to satisfy the appetite and provide energy. The vitamins come mostly in milk, fruits, vegetables, eggs, glandular meats and whole grain cereal foods. If you will keep these general rules in mind in planning meals you'll get the vitamins necessary for normal health. (A child should have a quart of milk.)

Question: How do you make carrots curl?

Cheese Tray, Rarebit Have Many Uses

A circular wooden tray, (and wooden trays are quite in vogue nowadays), holds an assortment of cheeses arranged wheel fashion. Perfect for supper or buffet such a tray definitely is smart and sophisticated, yet easy as anything to serve. It might be served for after-bridge with coffee or tea and crackers or wafers. Whole preserved fruit makes an excellent accompaniment.

To the left is a luncheon idea. Sliced tomatoes are arranged on crackers and a cheese sauce is poured over both. Crisp bacon is

Rarebit.

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons flour
1-2 cups milk
1-2 teaspoon salt
Dash of cayenne
1-2 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1-2 pound American cheese
Make a sauce of the butter, flour, milk and seasonings. When thick and smooth add the cheese, stir until cheese is melted. Serve on crackers which have been heated in the oven for a few minutes. (Four to six portions.)

DECATUR PREPARES $395,678 BUDGET

Increase in Expenses of $5,668 Proposed in Tentative List.

A proposed 1940 budget for Decatur, seeking an increase in expenditures of $5,668 over last year, will be distributed today by City Manager A. F. Newman, prior to discussion by the board of commissioners next Friday night.

The tentative financial program calls for expenditures totaling $395,678 broken down into 21 classifications, Newman said. The budget increase asked for represents the increase in total receipts during 1939 over 1938.

If passed by the city commissioners Decatur will give increased revenue to 12 departments. These are legislative, asking $2,170; finance, $4,420; engineering, $2,050; police, $27,120; waterworks, $30,200; extension of water systems, $9,000; streets, sewers and sidewalks, $33,430; sanitary, $12,410; incinerator, $4,000; cemetery and parks, $5,340; public lights, $15,000; and general fund appropriations for schools, $28,000.

Decreases are proposed in the administrative departments which seeks a 1940 appropriation of $5,940: law, $1,220; public property, $2,000; fire, $15,745; unclassified, $14,698; equipment and special items, $6,050; contingent fund, $3,980; public schools, $109,071; and public debt, $63,832.

Mr. Newman reported that during 1939 receipts for Decatur were recorded as follows: General government, $101,560; safety and welfare, $9,700; public service, $7,000; water department, $87,700; cemetery and parks, $5,550; cash on hand, $11,263; public schools, $109,071; public debt, $63,832.

The 1940 tax rate, if accepted, will be $1.50 per hundred and divided to give the general fund 33 cents, the school fund 75 cents and the bond and sinking fund 42 cents.

Forgotten Pole

This flagpole at the Governor's mansion was without a flag on Washington's birthday yesterday. Previously Governor Rivers had urged that schools and various organizations throughout the state properly celebrate the first President's birthday by flying their flags. But apparently the Governor forgot to check on his flagpole.

PRESS WATER FIGHT, ATLANTANS TOLD

W. J. Hogan Compares City's Ice Storm With Albany's Tornado.

Contending that Atlanta water users "were as much the victims of an ice storm as the people of Albany were the victims of a windstorm," W. J. Hogan, chairman of the rental committee of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, yesterday took issue with Mayor Hartsfield in asking Atlantans to cease the agitation to write off about $85,000 in excess water bills.

Hogan addressed a letter to the mayor in which he recited that "instead of (citizens) ceasing their efforts in their own behalf for that which they are entitled to, they should increase their efforts." At the same time John A. White, fifth ward councilman who offered a council resolution to write off the January excess because of protracted sub-freezing temperatures, said "I think once in 100 years we should give the people a break and show some human spirit."

FACTS ARE LISTED ON STATE HOSPITAL

Publication Tells About New Buildings at Milledgeville Institution.

Unusual facts about new buildings at the State Hospital at Milledgeville are contained in a booklet, "The First Year of the State Hospital Authority," compiled by Ivan Allen Jr., secretary-treasurer. Did you know, for example, that "The floor area of the new buildings is more than 15 acres. In the buildings there are three and one-eighth miles of corridors. There are 21 elevators for quick service. There are 3,000,000 bricks in the buildings and more than 1,000,000 pieces of tile, enough material to construct more than 500 six-room houses."

Throwing more light on the project, the booklet points out that the electrical system requires more than 6,500 lamp bulbs, 6,000 switches and 665,000 feet of wire. There are 170,000 panes of glass in place with 750,000 pounds of putty.

It also adds that there are more than 294,000 feet of pipe in use, enough to reach from Milledgeville through Macon to Forsyth. Steam is carried from the power plant to the buildings in tunnels large enough for a man to walk through standing straight up. It is estimated that 250,000,000 pounds of steam will be used each year.

The booklet reviews the history of the project, gives a description of various units and expresses appreciation to those who aided in the building program, especially Governor Rivers.

R. H. Freeman Jr. is chairman of the hospital authority and S. W. Howell is vice chairman.

WIFE RUNS OVER MAN, THROWN FROM SLED

DURANGO, Col., Feb. 22.—(AP) Hurling from a speeding toboggan, Dove McCollum, 26, was run over by a truck driven by his wife. He suffered a broken back. After her husband's sled, carrying six men, started down a six-mile run, Mrs. McCollum followed in the truck to haul the group back up the slope. The toboggan tumbled down the slope, carrying five of its occupants, but McCollum stayed aboard until it piled into a snow-bank on the other side of the slide. Seeing the five men sprawled to her right, Mrs. McCollum applied the brakes. The machine skidded and ran over her husband.

ATLANTA'S LOYALTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY TO WRITERS LAUDED MEETS TOMORROW

Malone Praises Constitution for Support of Lanier, Harris Broadcasts.

Ted Malone, famous radio figure, doffed his hat yesterday to Atlanta newspapers for supporting the publicity on Sidney Lanier and Joel Chandler Harris which Malone gave in a nation-wide radio hook-up recently.

Atlanta excelled even Boston, he said.

Here's his letter to The Constitution: "Hello there. 'In most cities the feeling between newspapers and radio is such that no co-operation is possible. I had no idea of doing much in Atlanta. But frankly, the loyalty of Atlanta newspapers toward their Southern authors was so much greater than the loyalty of Boston for its authors, I was astonished.'

"Any single one of the stories given Lanier and Harris was longer than the entire publicity given by all Boston newspapers on all of their distinguished citizens—Holmes... Longfellow... Lowell and Whittier."

"You have demonstrated eloquently why southerners have good reason to be proud of their south."

"I take my hat off to you. Sincerely, 'TED MALONE.'"

DAIRY CONFERENCE FOR SOUTH FORMED

Organization To Represent Industry in 11 South-eastern States.

Representatives of state dairy associations yesterday formed the Southern Dairy Conference, which will comprise 11 southeastern states.

C. L. Wood, of Atlanta, was named temporary chairman of the new organization, and C. M. McMillan, also of Atlanta, was elected temporary secretary.

Purpose of the conference is to permit an exchange of thought among representatives of the dairy industry. The first convention will be held in Atlanta early next year. Formation of the conference preceded the annual meeting of the Georgia Dairy Association, which will open a two-day session today.

Speaking of the dairy industry in Georgia, Wood, who also is president of the Georgia association, said: "Industrially, Georgia is far ahead of most of its sister states and this opens new markets at home for all phases of the dairy industry, especially in the production of milk and butter."

"Georgia incomes are going to climb rapidly in the coming years and it is up to us here in the state to prepare ourselves to keep those dollars at home. This requires new ideas, new vision and a spirit of co-operation."

INDIAN BANDIT QUEJO DIED OF STARVATION
LAS VEGAS, Nev., Feb. 22.—(AP) In a cave half a mile from the Colorado river, 10 miles downstream from what is now Boulder dam, the murderous Indian bandit Quejo died of starvation while hiding from pursuers.

Two prospectors found Quejo's body 21 years after his last bloody raid in southern Nevada and western Arizona. Chief of Police Frank Wait of Las Vegas, who as a sheriff's deputy hunted the killer of 14 white men, identified the remains by clothing and by a peculiar bone structure in one foot.

STATE CIO GROUPS WILL MEET HERE

Conference Tomorrow Is Sponsored Locally.

A week-end conference, sponsored by the Atlanta Industrial Union Council, will open at 8 o'clock tomorrow night at the Atlanta hotel, and will be attended by members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations' unions throughout Georgia.

The conference Sunday will open at 10 o'clock with Charles Gillman, president of the Atlanta council and of Local 34, United Automobile Workers of America, presiding and delivering the address of welcome. Lawrence H. Smith, regional director for the United Automobile Workers of America, will talk.

Other speakers will be R. R. Lawrence, southeastern director for the Textile Workers' Union of America; H. W. Denton, chairman of the Atlanta council's organizing committee; Bernard Borah, southern director for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America; Alton Lawrence, secretary of the League for Progressive Democracy; Lucy Randolph Mason, CIO public relations representative in the south, and Yelverton Cowherd, CIO regional director from Birmingham.

CHILD LAMA SITS ON GOLDEN THRONE

Sacred Boy Toddles Over Lucky Carpet to Survey Tibetan Subjects.

NEW DELHI, India, Feb. 23.—(Friday)—(P)—The child dalai lama formally ascended the golden throne of Tibet at Lhasa yesterday to reign as "His Holiness the Precious Dalai Lama, Owner of All Living Beings in the Snowy Country," official shortwave advices.

from a British mission in the Tibetan capital said today. Enthronement of the child occupied the entire day, and ceremonies may last for several more days. Yesterday's rites reached their crescendo when the solemn faced little boy, regarded as the six-year-old reincarnation of his predecessor, the 13th dalai lama, walked hand in hand with the chief abbot and another chamberlain through the lamplit great hall, thronged with dignitaries. Over the carpet marked with eight lucky signs he toddled, then clambered up on the massive throne and solemnly surveyed his subjects.

U. S. WILL REVIEW PERSONNEL SURVEY

Civil Service Experts To Aid Atlanta in Forming Plan.

Experts of the United States Civil Service Commission will review the job and salary classification of Atlanta's 2,500 non-school employees and will give every co-operation to the city, it was decided yesterday.

Arthur S. Flemming, member of the federal commission, and Lawson A. Moyer, executive director of the agency, conferred with members of the Atlanta Personnel Board at a luncheon at the Atlanta Athletic Club and told board members that while the commission could not undertake the survey as the board has requested, it would lend every assistance to the local group.

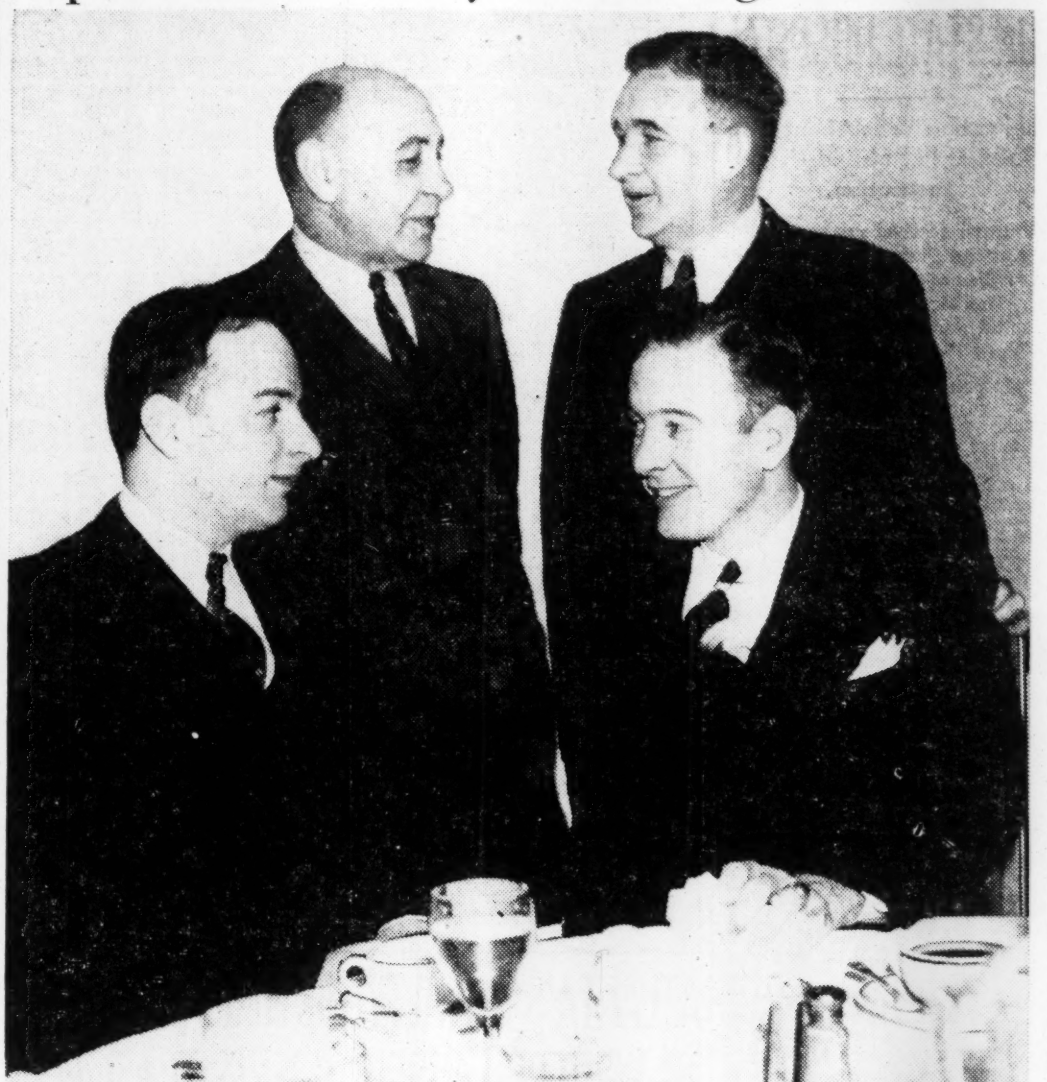

To Check Report. Ismar Baruch, chief of the division of personnel classification for the commission, will come to Atlanta after an outside agency has completed its work. This will be for the purpose of checking the recommendations, ironing out any discrepancies and anticipating any problems before the completed work is handed to city council for adoption, it was explained.

Aubrey Milam, secretary of the local board and foreman of the grand jury, presided at the luncheon. Gus Harper, chairman, and J. P. Allen, other local board members, also were present. Acting Mayor Frank H. Reynolds was a guest.

Myers Attends. Others present were O. E. Myers, fifth district manager of the federal bureau; W. S. Andrews, Myers' assistant; D. Doak, personnel director of the director's office of HOLC; Carl T. Sutherland, city personnel director and his assistant, Wade Bennett.

Not only did the federal officials agree to review findings before they are submitted to city council, but they said departmental experts would be glad to review bids for the classification, which the local board already has received, but for which no contract has yet been awarded.

Experts to Advise City in Forming Civil Service

HEAPE IS APPOINTED

RECOUNT IS SOUGHT IN MITCHELL VOTE

Petition Filed Contesting County Primary Held Wednesday.

CAMILLA, Ga., Feb. 22.—A request for a recount in one race and a petition contesting the entire election were filed today with the Mitchell county Democratic committee in connection with the county primary held yesterday, J. L. Palmer, chairman, said today.

The recount in the sheriff's race was requested by incumbent W. H. Baggs, who received 2,145 votes to 2,151 received by his opponent, McCulley Harris.

W. W. Bullard, who sought the place of county commissioner from the Camilla district, held by J. W. Eutler, contested the election, charging that the booths provided were not private and that the offices of some county officials were kept open and that ballots could be marked in them.

Bullard received 1,940 votes and Butler 2,352.

In the other cases, the winners were Orson G. Swindle, incumbent clerk of superior court; R. E. L. Culpepper, incumbent, ordinary; Elwood Williams, tax collector; J. Walter Jackson, incumbent, tax receiver; Ellis Sharp, treasurer; M. A. Warren, incumbent, judge of city court; Edward B. Hilliard, incumbent, county school superintendent; Eddie L. Carter, county surveyor; W. C. Allen, coroner; C. F. Williford, incumbent, county commissioner from 11th and 12th districts.

Stokes pointed out that neither the men nor the girls resided here at the time of the storm, but had come into the city following the twister.

ALBANY, Ga., Feb. 22.—(P)—James Clayton Preston and David L. Sanders, of Macon, pleaded guilty to charges of cheating and swindling at a hearing before Judge Clayton Jones, of Albany city court, yesterday. Each was fined $10 and costs or three months.

Two 17-year-old Macon girls, Cavis Clay and Lucille Bass, also pleaded guilty to the same charges and were given six-month suspended sentences.

Policemen Gordon Stokes, of Albany, who testified at the hearing, said the men and girls had posed as refugees of the recent tornado, and had obtained an order from the Red Cross, with which they could purchase $47 worth of furniture and other goods. Stokes said when the men and women were arrested it was revealed they already had in their possession four blankets, two comforts and other material.

Waikiki Frolic Costs Officers 19 Days' Pay

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 22.—(P)—Pleased and surprised to find three Pittsburgh policemen frolicking on the beach at Waikiki, Councilman George Evans wrote friends back home of the incident.

Raymond Geary, chief of the pay roll division in the controller's office, heard about it. He wondered what the policemen were doing on the island of hula girls and leis.

It developed that the patrolmen had 19 days' overtime coming for 1939, so they added those days to their regular vacations and set out for Honolulu. But the catch is that they can't take overtime for 1939 in 1940. The happy officers don't know it yet, but when they get back home they'll find they're out just 19 days' pay.

Dawn to Dusk in Holy Land Draws Enthusiastic Throng

Spectators Acclaim Phase Showing a Day in Palestine Produced by Special Lighting Effects, as Outstanding Feature of Working Model.

The Holy Land from dawn to dusk appears to be the outstanding feature of a unique exhibit at 489 Peachtree street, according to the comments of hundreds of Atlantans who paused long enough yesterday to see the Gauci Brothers' plaster model of Palestine.

Special lighting effects illuminate the huge panorama first with the glow of a morning sun, then with the brightness of noonday and finally with night time, with street lamps burning along the narrow lanes of the city of Jerusalem and lamps burning in the small farm houses.

Showing scenes in the life of Christ, the feature is part of a program, sponsored by The Constitution, which has brought a plaster reproduction of the Holy Land to the corner of Peachtree and Pine streets.

Life of Christ. Taken from the New Testament's description of the life of Christ are 124 separate scenes, from his birth in Bethlehem to the crucifixion on Calvary. Over 700 moving parts re-enact many of His miracles and describe, as well, the geography and the manner of living 1,900 years ago.

Carefully molded by Joseph and Salvatore Gauci, in 11 years of patient labor with 60,000,000 individual pieces, the model is animated by two motors which turn windmills, cause storms on the Sea of Galilee and bring to life nearly 100 figures mentioned in the Bible.

Some of the comments which continued to pour into The Constitution office are:

The Rev. C. R. Stauffer, of the First Christian church: "I appreciate the many improvements made on the exhibit since the previous showing. It is interesting and educational."

Indorse Exhibition. The Rev. Dr. W. B. Pearson, 2117 Boulevard drive: "Deepest appreciation to The Constitution for the possibility of this exhibition. I indorse it without hesitation."

Hugh L. Quarles Jr., 200 Ware avenue, East Point: "I enjoyed the exhibition very much. It is the best work of this kind I have ever seen."

Mrs. J. R. Sims, 1091 Gordon street: "A wonderful piece of workmanship. I hope every man, woman and child can see the display."

Miss Jeannette Carroll, Agnes Scott College: "A wonderful exact portrayal of the life of Christ and the geography of the Holy Land. The exhibit serves as a perfect guide in my Bible courses."

Elaborate Details. C. C. Wood, 2500 Memorial drive: "Very impressive and so complete as to every intricate detail as to command sincere reverence and keen appreciation of the hands that did the work."

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Ford, 589 Shannon road: "The exhibit is beautiful and quite interesting."

Mrs. J. C. Conway, 987 North avenue: "A marvelous pictorial reproduction of the Holy City. One never forgets what the eye impresses so forcibly. People of all ages should see this exhibit."

The Holy Land exhibit is open every day from 11 o'clock in the morning until 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and again from 7 o'clock at night until 9:30 o'clock. Admission for adults is 25 cents and for children 15 cents, the proceeds being given by The Constitution to charity.

CLOUDY WEATHER FORECAST TODAY

Sun Expected to Shine, But Not for Long.

Fair weather will come today—but will not remain for long, the weatherman predicts.

Though he expects the sun to shine for awhile, clouds and rain are waiting eastward from Texas and California and may blot out our sun within a short time. A new drop to 28 degrees is forecast for this morning, but the meteorologist thinks the warm sun will bring the temperature up to about 40 or so before the night. Yesterday, low was 32 and high 36—with some flurries of snow during the morning.

SLIGHT INJURY FATAL. SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 22.—(P) Blood poisoning, resulting from what was described as a slight blow on the lip from the branch of a tree, proved fatal today to Robert Franklin Terry Jr., 14, of Savannah.

Lew Ayres, Ginger Rogers Discuss Divorce Settlements

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 22.—Some one made a bad bargain. Either Alexander Korda or Columbia Pictures Corporation. About two years ago Korda made a movie in London costarring Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier. The picture, according to report, is not particularly good. A few months ago Korda sold the complete rights of American distribution to Columbia for $125,000. The studio has been advised to rush the picture into the theaters, to cash in on the highly publicized romance of Miss Leigh and Olivier, plus the current box-office glow surrounding Vivien for her Scarlett O'Hara portrayal. And now the question remains—will the public want to see the picture because of the two stars? Or will it stay away if the movie is mediocre? If the latter, then Korda made a good deal for himself. But if the picture is a success here then Columbia stands to make a million dollars on its investment.

Double Panel Skirt

By Lillian Mae.

First vote of every smart woman goes to the shirtwaister! This one, which is more attractive than ever, is Lillian Mae's Pattern 4397. Stitch it up in, say, a printed silk or a sunny new cotton. The shoulder yokes neatly hold in the soft fullness through the bodice. That gay scalloped-edged button opening is an effective device for breaking up your "width-across." Let double panels trim both the front and back skirt, to give tall-and-slim lines. The sleeves are either long, short and flared, or with cuffs which, together with the pretty scalloped collar, may be in clear contrast. Use the sewing instructor's shortcuts.

Pattern 4397 is available in misses' and women's sizes 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3 7/8 yards 35-inch fabric and 1-2 yard contrast. Send 15 cents in coins for this Lillian Mae pattern. Do not send stamps. Write plainly size, name, address and style number. Send your order to Lillian Mae Pattern Department, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

Learn To Play Popular Dance Tunes

Men like a girl who can keep the fun bubbling! And when you know how to play the piano you're always ready to entertain—with popular tunes, favorite dance music.

Fortunately, learning to play isn't nearly as difficult as you may think. By an interesting new method you quickly learn to read music, to master the keyboard. For your beginning lessons, you have a chart which you slip behind the piano keys. This chart has an exact, full-sized "picture" of the keys commonly used for popular music. The keys on your chart fit directly behind the matching keys on the piano.

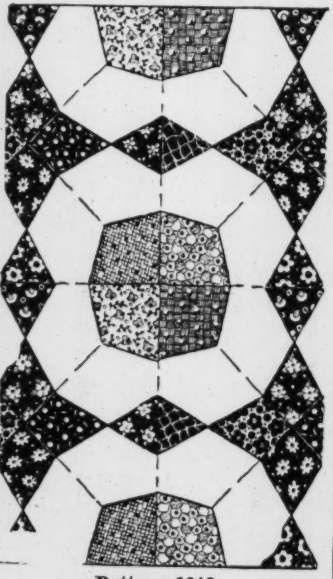

To find what key to strike, you look at your music. Is the first note of the melody staff right below the lines? You look for that note on the lower staff of your chart. Above it is the key you strike, number 3. If the note is a flat or a sharp, you find it on the upper staff of the chart.

Soon you can tell at a glance what keys to play, your fingers work quickly together. You master time values—waltz, fox-trot rhythms—and you learn how to fit the accompanying bass chords to old-time melodies. For an entire piece you may need only three or four different bass chords. And then you are ready to play your own popular favorites the same easy way, to entertain on dates, parties.

Send 15c in coins for our instruction book, A SHORT CUT TO PIANO PLAYING, to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address and the name of instruction book.

Youths' "First Impressions" Are Important

Foundation Complements Fine-Grained Complexions

By Lillian Mae.

Spring parties will soon be producing a new crop of subbees, and the wise ones will let no grass grow under their feet—for "first impressions" are of great importance—and it's well to resolve to be as beautiful as possible.

Shiny noses need no longer haunt the sparkling "debbies," for one of our foremost cosmetic artists has just designed a foundation for "fine-grained" skins—whether young in years or just in texture.

This wonderful woman feels that much of the trouble young people are experiencing in finding a suitable make-up has been in the lack of a suitable foundation for young and delicate skins. So she is now introducing such a foundation of feather-light texture, which cream lends a lovely natural finish to the skin so that powder goes on smoothly and stays on. It is lovely to use on arms and shoulders, too. It keeps the skin petal-soft.

Although designed especially for very young skins, as a first make-up foundation, this new cream will be welcomed joyously by those who have very delicate and very sensitive skins, for which they have perhaps never been able to find a powder foundation light enough in texture.

It comes in three lovely shades—natural, rachel and rose rachel. Be one of the first in Atlanta to try this new foundation. Then you can tell your friends about your find. Phone me and I'll tell you its name and also where it may be purchased. Write me if you do not live in Atlanta, but be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Readers Ask If Dampness In Cellar Impairs Health

By Dr. William Brady.

Milwaukee correspondent agrees that a modern house needs no dining room. She has lived happily for 20 years in a house the first floor of which is L-shaped and they usually use the shorter end of the L for dining.

After all, I suppose people have to eat somewhere. Yet I can think of a good many otherwise attractive homes where the pleasant part of the house is given over to the exclusive use of eating.

Of course if the linen is dirty or the dishes are not as fine as you would like to have the neighbors think you have, it may be preferable, to your uncultivated taste, to retire to the chamber of horrors to feed your face. But if you are not ashamed of the dump or obsessed with conventionalized taste, to retire to the chamber of horrors to feed your face. But if you are not ashamed of the dump or obsessed with conventionalized taste, to retire to the chamber of horrors to feed your face.

Most people wonder, even if they do not ask, whether a house without a cellar or basement under it isn't damp; whether living in the patio or on the lawn under the trees or in the garden. Somehow the genuine friendliness and hospitality a guest feels when the meal is served elsewhere than the formal dining room remains long.

Answer—Thank you, Ma'am. Take it as a joke, with a portrait of Tony the Wirish Terror hanging over my desk? Incidentally, a good many dog owners have reported marked improvement in the coat and in the life of their dogs when they feed regularly vitamins B-complex and D.

How Are Your Pullets Doing? In Nebraska we had no trouble raising chickens. Not so in Oregon, although we gave them cod liver oil and fed them according to the best scientific methods. Here they became sickly and died off from one thing and another after they reached maturity. They would not come when called for feeding. Never saw such hens.

Then, based on our own experience with your Loden Ration, we began feeding the chickens 4 drops twice a week in their cheese. Now I never saw pullets and hens healthier and happier. They come running as soon as they hear the call for feed, scratch vigorously and sing to beat the band. They lay well, too. Even old hens that have moulted come and eat with relish—I never saw moulting hens do that before.

Answer—Thank you. I know nothing about poultry. Instructions for taking iodine ration sent on request if you inclose stamped, addressed envelope.

light and make the basement more cheerful.

I decided to try out your idea myself. Began eating wheat germ every day. Had been in poor health for years. Presently found my health and strength increasing.

Man's Dignity Is His Best Bodyguard

By Caroline Chatfield.

Anybody who wants to can hood a woman's intuition. But not I. Her intuition, or whatever you wish to call it, enables a woman to scent danger a long way off and even if she hasn't thought the matter through or put her fears into words, when her intuition warns her of danger she takes steps to avert it.

Constantly I receive letters from young wives and old who are worried because their husbands are too free and easy with the feminine branch of the office help. Not that these wives suspect that monkey business is going on in the place of business, but that they are fearful of the general let down in office dignity. They want to know what to do about it.

Don't suppose that these wives have reasoned it out that personal dignity is the best bodyguard a man can have, a protection against several sorts of dangers to life and limb. No they haven't. Nevertheless intuitively, instinctively these women have become a bit nervous when they've seen their men dropping their personal dignity and they've become furious when the men have refused to pick it up.

The average wife isn't willing for her husband to call any girl by her first name except family friends and social acquaintances.

She makes no allowance for the new day in which handles to names are as obsolete as hansom cabs. She makes no discount for the youth of the feminine employee, length of service or irreproachable reputation of said employee. That first name business is an offense, a familiarity that's undignified and she wants no part of it.

Frankly, I don't blame her. Of course the office is man's domain and there's none to say him nay if he prefers to have a second class place of business. He may call his employees by their first names, work without his coat and collar, prop his feet on the desk thereby creating an atmosphere of familiarity that breeds contempt in his office. I wouldn't say that he couldn't get the business under this plan but he certainly couldn't get best grade business women in his office, which is the very thing that worries his wife.

The new type of business man may be able to preserve order in the office, merit the respect of the employees, maintain a decent dignity in business while he's Bill and Jack to Jane and Betty and vice-versa. A short time ago a man couldn't manage that way. He had to have handles on names to hold everybody in proper place, including himself and he had to maintain a semblance of formality in the office to insure efficiency there as well as to insure peace at home.

Alas! The line between good taste (which is good manners) and good morals is very fine. Trust a wife to find it and warn her husband about overstepping. Intuitively she knows that personal dignity is the best safeguard. That's why she raises a ruckus when papa lapses and calls his secretary by her first name.

MY DAY: A Plan of Jobs For Relief Clients

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

GOLDEN BEACH, Fla.—Two very interesting things have come my way lately, both of which seem worth studying. Perhaps various communities may find them adaptable to their own particular needs. The first plan is one tried out in Williamsport, Pa., and is called "A Plan of Jobs for Relief Clients." The cardinal principle laid down is that it is the obligation of every community to reduce its relief load. It must seek to do this by methods which will improve the condition of those in need of assistance, for the only way to arrive at a permanent solution of the relief load is to procure every employable client a job on a private pay roll.

In Williamsport, they claim to have found that 70 per cent of those classified as able and willing to work are actually unskilled or possess obsolete skills. About 85 per cent of these unskilled clients possess sufficient background, education and inherent ability to do skilled or semi-skilled work, so Williamsport established a re-training school.

A visitor goes to each family on relief, and the member of that family who seems most likely to profit by training is picked out, even though it might be a younger member of the family instead of the head. They try to do a good job of studying individual capacities before anyone is assigned to training in the school. The school trains for a score or more occupations, so there is leeway for change. If the first occupation is not suitable, the school permits a change. Once a person is trained, it does its best to find a job for him and then follows up his work on that job. This plan has been undertaken by the various community and welfare agencies, who co-operate in it with the public schools in their adult education program. The training, usually works out at a cost of about $100 per client.

I wonder if you are as impressed as I am by this program and whether it will be tried out in any other community?

The second thing of interest is my recent discovery of the association for the study of Negro life and history. This organization has just celebrated its annual week with a program sponsored by the association and carried out in its schools, churches, organizations and institutions of all kinds interested in a knowledge of the Negro race and its history.

There is nothing which gives one so much pride as to be familiar with the achievements of one's own race. There is so much today in literature and art which can give the Negro people a sense of the genius and achievement of their race, but too often their history is forgotten. I think this association will promote good will and respect between neighbors of different races in our own country.

For the benefit of some of my friends who warned me that I could not spend any quiet days in Florida, I should record that during the past 24 hours I have spent many of them lying in the sun and find it very pleasant.

Women Crave Appreciation More Than Admiration

By Ida Jean Kain.

Traditionally, women are supposed to be vain creatures. But what they really crave is appreciation, not admiration. If a woman were set down on a desert island equipped with a beauty salon staffed by robots who did excellent work but could neither think nor speak, she would pay one visit out of curiosity. After that, she probably wouldn't go near the place! Why bother? There would be nobody around to care how she looked!

All too many women let themselves go because they imagine that nobody cares how they look. If that is your state of mind and you can afford to do it, lie yourself to the nearest beauty and exercise salon and let the experts take you in hand. They will study your facial contours so that the most flattering coiffure may be chosen. They will scold you for failure to take better care of your skin.

The director of the body conditioning department will register personal concern over your weight, measurements and posture. At least once a week an instructor will stand over you as you perform the exercises that will give you a more youthful figure and posture. If you belong to a class, you will compare notes with your companions of the exercise mat and will be cheered up considerably whenever you make better progress than the rest. Perhaps you will be held up as a good example—or bad! You will be paying for it, but you will be getting the appreciation your efforts warrant, and the psychological value is not to be estimated.

The majority of you, however, will have to take yourselves to task. It will help you to tuck away in your mind this thought: The friends and family who love you are not dreading of hurting you by telling you that anything is wrong with the way you look will quickly tell you how much better you are looking! There are no sweeter words than "you are looking simply marvelous!"

You can do a very thorough job of finding out for yourself what is wrong. And, with or without supervision, you will have to do the work in making improvements. But if you would like the serious experience of salon exercise, do these favorites from the beauty bazaar along Fifth avenue:

1. Posture corrective. Position: Lying on the floor on the back, hands on the shoulders with the elbows shoulder-level on the floor at the sides, knees flexed and soles of feet together, outer edges of feet resting on floor near buttocks, entire back, including back of neck, pressed as closely against the floor as possible.

Movement: Without letting the back rise off the floor, and keeping soles of feet together, try to slide feet down floor until the legs are straight.

2. For a slim waist.

Position: Still on back on floor, hands clasped and extended up on floor overhead, legs together and straight down. Have back as flat on floor as possible.

Movement: Holding this position, arc the body sideways on the floor, first in one direction, then the other.

Rolling exercises to slim waist and hips are greatly in vogue at the exercise salons. Send to Ida Jean Kain, in care of The Constitution, for leaflet of efficient "Rolling Exercises." Please inclose a stamped return envelope.

Chic Basic Dress

By Barbara Bell.

This design was so extraordinarily successful, the first time we pictured it, that we hasten to repeat it, so that you can send it now if you missed it the first time. You can easily see what makes 1878-B such a favorite with those who take women's sizes. The lines are so lovely! That slim-hipped skirt, cut high in the front, has smart back fullness so flattering to those inclined to over-plump. The back belt, which can be finished with a buckle or a bow, enables you to keep the waistline smooth and snug.

The bodice is deftly gathered to create a high bustline. Sleeves are short, long, or three-quarter push-up style. The sole trimming is a row of buttons that emphasizes the slim, molded silhouette. Make this of flat crepe, thin wool or rayon jersey, and you'll love it!

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1878-B is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4 1/2 yards of 39-inch fabric for long or three-quarter sleeves; 4 1/4 yards with short.

Five Brightest Planets To Swing Into Necklace Formation Today

Spectacle Probably Will Not Occur Again for More Than a Century.

Don't look now but Mother Nature is getting set to show earthly mortals a once-in-a-lifetime spectacle.

A spectacle of the five brightest planets of the solar system swinging into a rare formation resembling a long glowing necklace. This astronomer's dream will swing into the western sky for two weeks beginning today but will be at its best on February 28 and 29.

Five Planets.
The five planets which can be seen with the naked eye in their necklace-like formation are Mercury, Jupiter, Venus, Saturn and Mars. Uranus, a sixth planet, will be there but not discernible with the naked eye.

Judge John D. Humphries, judge of the Fulton superior court and an amateur astronomer of note, said the spectacle will be best seen about two hours after sundown in as much as Mercury quickly fades into the haze of the twilight sky. He said when the planets line up it will be the equivalent of having five evening stars on view simultaneously.

Various Distances.
Judge Humphries also expressed the opinion the same formation won't be seen again for more than a century and he has no idea when such a spectacle occurred in the past.

This same theory was echoed by William H. Barton Jr., executive curator of New York's Hayden Planetarium, who added: "No one has any idea when such a formation last occurred."

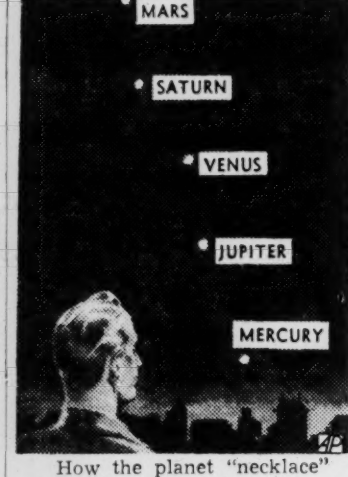

Judge Humphries pointed out that while the average observer will seem to see the planets in a line in which one is about as close to the earth as the next, actually they are various distances out in the universe.

Millions of Miles Apart.
Jupiter, which will appear to be right next to Mercury and Venus really is millions of miles further away than either, he said. Saturn, seems to rub shoulders with Venus, and Mars is even further out than Jupiter, he added.

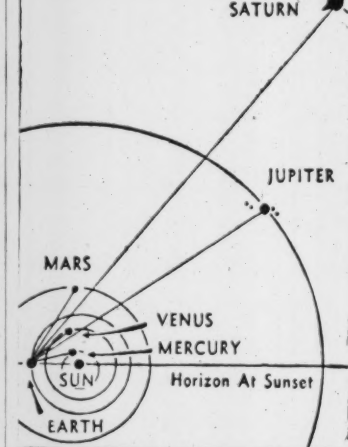

In emphasizing the rarity of the occasion, Judge Humphries pointed out the wide difference in time in which it requires the planets to move around the sun.

It takes Mercury 88 days, Jupiter 12 years, Saturn 29 years, Venus 225 days and Mars 687 days.

INVITATION TO GRIFFIN.

How the planet "necklace" will appear from the earth.

PRESIDENT REFUSES TO BE 'SMOKED OUT'

Expected to Remain Mute
Until National, International Situation Clarifies.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Renewed efforts to "smoke out" President Roosevelt on the third term issue are not expected to influence the chief executive one way or another in whatever plans he may have in mind for revealing his future course of action to the country.

The best informed opinion at the moment is that he will continue to maintain his silence until the national and international situation clarifies sufficiently for him to reach a definite decision as to who is Democratic successor should be.

Despite the dire forebodings of some of his critics there are evidences that his position as the dominant force within the party have been helped rather than hindered by his silence. Already the ball has started rolling for sending Roosevelt delegates to the national convention from a half dozen states which hold early preferential primaries.

In New Hampshire, for example, the stage is all set for selecting without a contest a slate of Roosevelt delegates when the state holds its primary March 12. One-sided New Deal victories are also predicted in the Wisconsin primary on April 2 and in Illinois April 9, when it is claimed, a severe jolt will be given the candidacy of Vice President Garner. A similar favorable outcome seems in the cards for subsequent primaries in California May 7, Ohio May 14, and in Oregon May 17.

If there is any basis for the belief held in some quarters that the President is deliberately holding off an announcement in order to control the convention, then it would not be surprising to see him maintain his silence until July. At the way things are now going that certainly would be good strategy from the standpoint of the New Dealers.

JUSTICE HUGHES HONORS EDUCATOR
Heads Booker T. Washington Stamp Patrons.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes will head the national committee of patrons of the Booker T. Washington stamp celebration.

The stamp, honoring the Negro educator and founder of Tuskegee Institute in Alabama, will go on sale as one of the "Famous American" series at the Tuskegee post office April 7.

"In these days when intolerance and racial strife are rampant throughout the world," said Dr. William Jay Schieffelin, chairman of the institute's board of trustees, "we feel it most significant that a distinguished champion of the dignity of the human spirit and of human rights should lead other Americans in honoring a man who was born in slavery... yet who rose to become one of the greatest educators of his people."

PRESIDENTIAL RACE, RATE WAR LINKED

Freight Fight Seen as Nominating Factor When Democrats Assemble.

By ED L. BRIDGES,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Sectional seething over parity freight rates may join the international situation as a nominating factor when the nation's Democrats assemble in Chicago to choose their man to run for President.

There is talk already of the delegates into a bloc to be offered the aspirant who pledges removal of the "tariff barriers." Georgia Governor Rivers and Arizona Governor Bob Jones have exchanged ideas on the subject.

The Southern Governors' Conference recently won an Interstate Commerce Commission ruling granting parity freight rates on certain commodities produced in the south and shipped into the east. The conference then reinforced its counsel by hiring an additional attorney for a flat $75,000 and started a class rate complaint toward the ICC.

Came a challenge from the east yesterday. Governor Leverett Saltonstall, aroused by "a threat by southern interests to force preferential freight charges on textile products" revived Massachusetts participation in the New England railroad freight committee.

The New England conference is as full of Republican governors as the southern conference is solidly Democratic. This prompts the question of whether the Maine-Vermont sector will swing its convention vote toward a presidential aspirant promising help in the freight rate fight.

Saltonstall's assertions are certain to absorb the attention of the southern governors when they meet to push their rate campaign at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., next Monday.

"Preferential railroad charges from producing to market centers are a dangerous lure to take industry away from this state," the Massachusetts executive said as he named additional members from his state to the New England rate committee.

"It stands to reason that if transportation charges are placed on an unfair basis, new industry will be unwilling to locate here, regardless of how inviting other conditions might be."

Southern governors take a leaf from the same book. They contend that rates "discriminating" against the south long have turned industry's face away from this section.

PUBLIC GIFTS PERMIT OPERATION FOR GIRL

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 22.—(AP) Donations from sympathizers in three southern states have given 16-year-old Dorothy Mae Dock-ins, of Knoxville, Tenn., a new chance for health and happiness. Tonight she is in Graduate hospital here, awaiting an operation for removal of a wire staple which a cough forced into her left lung six years ago. It was disclosed recently by an X-ray examination. Physicians advised that she be sent here, but Dorothy's father, a quarry worker, couldn't afford the trip, but Knoxville newspapers publicized the girl's plight, and contributions poured in.

MARSHAL TO SERVE ORDER ON RIVERS

Showdown in Miller Case Expected When Governor Disobeys Injunction.

Another development in the protracted and somewhat sanguinary controversy between Governor Rivers and W. L. Miller, ousted chairman of the State Highway Board, is expected sometime today when a United States deputy marshal serves Governor Rivers with an injunction signed several days ago by Federal Judge Bascom Deaver at Macon.

The injunction prohibits Rivers and Assistant General John E. Stoddard from preventing Miller's return to the Highway Department under a superior court order issued last month. The Governor has indicated he will ignore Judge Deaver's order just as he has ignored the superior court order upon which the Deaver action is predicated.

Sub-zero temperature returned to New England last night, but the weather in that region was clear after a turbulent week of heavy snow, flooding rain, sleet, and coastal gales.

VOTE THIRD TERM, GEORGIANS URGED

Judge Will Cummings, of Chattanooga, Confers With Rivers.

County Judge Will Cummings, of Chattanooga, here yesterday, said he hoped that Georgia would "second the motion" made by the many other sections of the nation and vote for President Franklin Roosevelt for a third term.

Judge Cummings came here yesterday for a conference with Governor Rivers concerning road projects in north Georgia in Dade, Walker and Catoosa counties. The Governor assured Judge Cummings that before his term ended the highway department would complete three projects in that area "which would bring untold advantages to the entire section of northwest Georgia, hitherto neglected, and promote a fine spirit of co-operation between our neighbors on the border in Tennessee."

Judge Cummings said that Tennessee is certain to cast its lot with President Roosevelt for a third term, and said that "I sincerely trust that the people of Georgia will follow our suit—if I can depend upon reports from this great state. I think that there is no doubt whatsoever about what will happen—Georgia will support President Roosevelt with all its heart."

WEIR WILL DIRECT G. O. P. FUND DRIVE

Steel Head's Business Record Cited; Labor Officials Back 22 Senators.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP)—The Republicans got organized for raising funds today with the appointment of Ernest T. Weir, Pittsburgh steel man, as chairman of the party's finance committee.

The Weir appointment was announced by John D. M. Hamilton, the chairman of the Republican national committee, with a statement which noted that Weir and his company, National Steel Corporation, were "famous for having made a profit every year during the depression."

BABSON SAYS PARTIES CAN'T HELP JOBLESS

BABSON PARK, Fla., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Neither the Democratic nor Republican parties, Roger W. Babson asserted today, will be able to solve the unemployment problem in the United States "because politics are so mixed" with the plans of both.

The hope of the nation, the statistician and business consultant said at the closing session of the annual business conference, rests in "a coalition party," in which the "best interests of both parties" can join forces.

G. O. P. BELIEVED MOST LIKELY TO BALANCE BUDGET

Gallup Poll Shows One-Third of Persons Surveyed Think Neither Party Will End Deficit.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 22.—The repeated attacks which Republican candidates like Senator Taft and Thomas E. Dewey have launched against the fiscal policies of the New Deal raise the question whether the Republicans, if they get into office, are more likely to balance the budget than the Democrats.

A national survey just completed by the Institute shows that the largest single group of voters think that neither party will be able to accomplish this aim.

The specific issue on which opinion was measured follows:

"Which political party do you think is more likely to balance the federal government's budget in the next four years—the Republicans or the Democrats?"

Those with opinions voted at follows:

Republicans more likely 42%

Democrats more likely 23%

Approximately one voter in every six polled (16 per cent) expressed no opinion.

The public attitude toward the whole issue of spending and budget balancing is conditioned largely by party affiliation, the Republican voters being, on the whole, much more in favor of reduced spending and budget balancing than the Democrats. The intensely partisan character of opinion on spending is a good indication that it will be a leading campaign issue. The question still undecided is whether the budget-balancing appeals of Republican candidates will attract enough Democratic voters to help swing the election to the G. O. P.

On this question today's poll throws some light. The results show that while the great majority of Republicans confidently believe that the G. O. P. can balance the budget, the largest single group of Democrats do not believe either party will be able to accomplish the feat.

CAMPAIGN TO FIND VETS JOBS OPENS

Employment of Men Past 40 Is Sought.

A campaign to encourage the employment of men past 40 years of age—especially veterans of the World War—has been launched by the employment committee of the American Legion, Department of Georgia, it was announced yesterday.

Each post of the Legion in Georgia has appointed an employment chairman who will keep in touch with veterans and employers and co-operate with the Georgia State Employment Service.

With offices in 31 cities, the employment service designated a veterans' placement officer who will give special attention to veterans.

DECLARES ALABAMA NO 'LIZARD' STATE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(P)—It is doing Alabama an injustice, contends Representative Patrick, Democrat, Alabama, to call it the "Lizard State."

Texas and Arizona have lizards they are proud of, Patrick argues, and Alabama does not want to deprive these states of any just claims.

In a statement in today's Congressional Record, the Alabamian said the World Almanac hung the "lizard" title on his state.

"Alabama is called the 'Cotton State' and may be called by other names in other parts of the country," Patrick related, "but so far as I am able to ascertain—and I was born and raised there—we do not have any more lizards, and they do not crawl any more lowly or any more peculiarly, and we take no greater pride in them than they do in some adjoining states."

FIREMEN CATCH UP WITH A MOVING FIRE

TWIN FALLS, Idaho, Feb. 22.—(P)—E. G. Prescott pulled his garbage truck to the curb when he heard sirens.

Firemen halted alongside the truck. The garage was on fire, but the firemen got it out.

Beware Coughs Following Flu

After the flu is over and gone, the cough that follows feels like it will tear your chest walls apart. You need relief and ready help. Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble—loosens germ laden phlegm, increases secretion and aids nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. No matter how many medicines you have tried, tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding that you are to like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back. A Gift to Georgia

While today it is only possible to measure the $500,000 gift from the Julius Rosenwald Fund for the training of Georgia rural teachers in the statistic of dollars, it will undoubtedly prove in years to come that, through these dollars, the Fund has given to this state something which can never be fully computed in its contribution to betterment of social and economic conditions.

Such a sum devoted to the better training of rural school teachers, with the added factor of the state program for equalizing of teachers' pay, should be a tremendous step forward in efforts to make opportunity and life in the rural areas as attractive to youth as in any city. It is, of course, the purpose of the teacher pay equalization program to induce teachers, after they are trained, to return to the schools of their own rural communities; to remove the lure of higher pay in the city school systems which has too frequently served to draw the best teacher personnel away from the country schools.

The Rosenwald Fund gift is a tribute of approval to Georgia's educational program and reveals the confidence the directors of that fund feel in the board of regents of the university system of the state, in State School Superintendent M. D. Collins, in the institutions chosen for direct expenditure of the money, and in the teachers and the people of the state as a whole.

It is the largest gift of its kind made to any state. It will finance the most intelligent and constructive program for the advancement of rural education. It will bring nearer that day when the true democracy of equal education opportunity shall spread to every child in the land, no matter how remote his home from the great urban centers and no matter how restricted his economic background.

When, as a result of this gift, a new stream of better trained teachers is flowing to the rural schools all over the state, when teacher opportunity is so equalized there shall be nothing to make urban duties more attractive than those in a country school, Georgia, fundamentally an agricultural state, will be building, substantially and rapidly, a citizenship far greater in economic power, far happier in home surroundings and far more independent of outside factors in life.

There has been, in the past, too much human erosion, as well as soil erosion, in Georgia. The latter has drained the richness of the soil down the rivers to be lost in the sea. The former has drained some of the best manhood and womanhood of the rural sections into the cities. Today many of those suffering most severely because of unemployment and want in the city areas could again be happy and independent upon the land.

It is to bring opportunity for education in the country to the level of that in the city that the Rosenwald gift is dedicated. Such a purpose will go far toward keeping those who can find their finest destiny upon the land, away from the congested economic problems of the city.

Making a Language

Soil conservation and relief have forced the government into a number of curious situations, of which not the least strange is the necessity of developing a new, written language for the Navajo Indians.

The 16,000,000-acre reservation in New Mexico and Arizona has suffered seriously from soil erosion, but it has been difficult to obtain full co-operation from the Indians because of language barriers which make explanation of technical matters almost impossible. Because of this, the Indian bureau had the new language developed by Dr. John F. Harrington, of the Smithsonian Institution, and Oliver La Farge, author of Indian books.

The new medium of communication is expected to meet the need for articulate explanation of the government program, and at the same time open a new educational field for the Indians.

The Screwiest (?) Industry

According to a fascinating story in the current issue of The Saturday Evening Post, the job of manufacturing airplanes takes rank as the most nerve-wracking, perplexing, agonizing and unpredictable industry on the face of the earth.

The article in question is titled "Bombers by the Pound," and is written by Hurd Barrett, who describes his job as in the "Production" department of a modern factory, turning out bombers and fighter planes for the United States navy and other customers.

One popular fallacy which Barrett promptly punctures is the oftused screen or fiction plot of the foreign spy who steals the blueprints of the tremendously secret new American plane. Planes just aren't built that way, he says. There may be blueprints but they are so indefinite no one, save the particular factory engaged on the job, could possibly make a plane from them.

Planes, he points out, are neither products of exact, mechanical quantity production, nor are they custom built. Perhaps a combination of both achieved by a sense-trying method of trial and error.

What's more, he says, no two planes are exactly alike. Not even two out of an order for 100, built according to specifications of some governmental agency. For each plane will have some little change or two or a score, suggested by the experience in building the last one, or directed because some ranking officer of the flying fields has had a dream or a brain-storm or a genuinely valuable idea.

Barrett pays high tribute, however, to American navy and army flying authorities.

Referring to Wright Field, the army's famous testing ground, he writes:

"Don't forget that it is largely due to Wright that American export military equipment which our air corps considers to be two years obsolete is outperforming and outfighting some of Papa Goering's vaunted best."

Few magazine articles have been so informative and so interesting about an industry which is public interest number one at this time, than this Hurd Barrett story, "Bombers by the Pound," in The Saturday Evening Post.

Quantity Production

An unexpected, but logical, benefit is coming to the United States as a direct result of the heavy orders for airplanes placed in this country by Great Britain and France. And, it must be added, by Finland, which country is already operating an active purchasing mission in Washington.

The speed-up in plane production necessitated by these orders has reduced the cost of each plane. In other words, quantity production is already being reflected to lowered cost, reproducing in a small way the tremendous lowering in automobile costs brought about by the mass manufacture of cars upon the assembly lines of the great auto factories.

That the United States shares directly in the benefit of this lowered cost is shown in a report, recently made public in Washington, that the United States Navy has been able to purchase 578 planes for the total estimated cost of an original order for 500.

While the house reduced the appropriation for immediate purchase of new navy planes solely because plane improvement is so rapid that the new machine of today is counted obsolete within a few months, there will be an added advantage to deferred purchases.

Within a year or two, if the pressure of orders keeps up, it will be possible to buy two planes for the money now needed to secure one.

A BITTER PILL FOR THE NAZIS

(From The St. Louis Post-Dispatch.)
Germany's Nazi regime, which always boasted of the thoroughness of its organization and planning, has been forced to swallow a bitter pill. It has become necessary for it to appear to exiled Jewish doctors to return to the Reich because of a drastic shortage of medical men.

Little imagination is required to picture the desperation of a situation that has forced these Jew-haters and Jew-baiters to swallow their pride so ignominiously. But there is no need to leave the matter to the imagination. According to figures published in the New Republic, there were, in 1933, 66,000 physicians and surgeons in Germany, Austria, Czechoslovakia and occupied Poland.

Today there are but 37,000 of these left—or one doctor for every 2,800 inhabitants. Yet of these, 29,000 are with the armed forces, leaving only 8,000 physicians to care for a civilian population of about 90,000,000. Little wonder that Germany's excellent panel system is a thing of the past, and that its elaborate industrial medical setup and school examination system have broken down utterly.

The pathetic thing about it all is that the people, many of whom never approved of the persecution of the Jews, must now pay a terrible penalty for the blood-thirsty fury of "Aryan leadership."

Of course, even the most conceited Nazi official can have little real hope that Jewish medical men will return to the beleaguered Reich. So far, it is reported, only two have accepted the "invitation," one so that his aged parents might be permitted to leave the country, the other because his wife was mortally ill in a concentration camp where no Aryan doctor was permitted to attend her.

And why should Jewish medical men think of answering this call? What can the most sacred pledges mean, coming from a regime that, even as it utters them, is sending thousands of other Jews to the new hell it has prepared for them in Poland?

STRAWS IN THIRD-TERM WIND WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—A cheerful, out frankly muddle-minded Washington observer, has got into the habit of saying, "This is my week for believing the President will run again next week. I'll believe the opposite. I do it by turns, depending on the direction of the prevailing wind." As the prevailing wind is about all there is to go on, it may be well to offer a collection of straws now blowing in it.

Item: The White House crowd is now saying that the President will take a western trip in the early summer. The idea is that while the Republicans are holding their convention, the President will be dedicating parks, receiving ovations and taking the headlines with apply timed speeches. A western Progressive conference is being tentatively arranged, to be held on the coast perhaps near the time of the Republican convention. Such a conference, with the Progressives shouting for the President to run again, would be the perfectly dramatic setting for a presidential statement on the third-term question.

At any rate, it is predicted that the President's third-term statement will be reserved for the western trip, whether or not it is made at the Progressive conference. This straw points third termwards.

STREAMS OF TALK Item: Two strikingly interesting new streams of talk are now flowing through Washington. One, originating among the New Dealers, is to the effect that the President has no intention of running. The theory is that the President "has to run" is based on the supposition that he is the only tried and true New Dealer who can get the Democratic nomination. The increasing organization support for the President's renomination has, perhaps strangely, led some of the New Dealers to conclude that he may be strong enough to dictate another nominee, such as Robert H. Jackson or William O. Douglas.

The other, ostensibly originating with Secretary of State Cordell Hull, is to the effect that the President has no intention of running. Hull has told the President he has personal reasons for not wanting the nomination. Hull was the only orthodox candidate for whom it was sure the President would stand. The talk that he has withdrawn himself, plus the talk about the President not having to run, adds up to a suggestion that a shift play to Jackson or Douglas may indeed be attempted. While such a shift play seems unlikely to succeed, this straw points away from the third term.

PLAYING TO THE GALLERIES Item: It is now definitely known that Chicago was chosen as the scene of the Democratic convention on direct orders from the White House. Originally, Chicago was unwilling to pay for the privilege. In discussing the matter with the President, Jim Farley took the stand, "No pay, no play." Then, at the last moment, pro-third-term boss, Ed Kelly, raised a war chest and paid. As a result, the convention galleries will be filled with Kelly henchmen screaming their lungs out for the President's renomination. This straw is another pointing third termwards.

YES AND NO Item: From quarters very close to the White House, comes protest against the common story that the President makes his plans a secret because he wants to retain his power in his party. It's said that a true explanation is that the President keeps his counsel because he does not wish to lose his influence abroad.

He is pictured as wanting to withdraw himself, but feeling that he must run if the Allies are in danger of defeat. Under this interpretation, his decision will be deferred until the last minute in order to allow the expected spring offensives to show definite results. And this straw, therefore, points nowhere at all at present.

Oddly enough, the straw pointing nowhere at all is the most convincing. It is the fact that the President is the second choice of both the Connecticut and Massachusetts delegates. Farley is avowedly anti-third term unless the security of the country is threatened. Farley's action, therefore, would logically indicate confidence that the President will not run again except under circumstances in which Farley can consistently support him.

Nevertheless, the amiable fellow who believes one thing one week, the other, the next, probably has the best system.

How'll You Have It Wrapped?

It's getting to be difficult to buy anything, from a box of matches to an automobile, that isn't wrapped in cellophane. Every now or then we all realize that general fact, but I wonder how many of us can remember back to the days when packaging was practically unknown.

Do you remember when "most any article of food you could buy was exposed, open to all the dust and dirt and contamination that might be floating around, in boxes or barrels, on shelves or open counter, in the corner grocery store?"

When cuts of meat lay on an imitation marble slab with little, if any, thought of refrigeration, let alone a dust cover, the flies. When you didn't buy crackers by the package, but by the pound out of an open barrel and when the grocer scooped your sugar out of another barrel with a scoop that might have been lying on that particular spot on the counter, where Uncle Jim, most persistent loafer of the neighborhood, was accustomed to sit.

When prunes and dried apples and cooking lard never knew package or covering and when your children helped themselves to jelly beans or crystallized fruit by sticking their grubby paws—just like all the other kids—into the convenient wooden box at the end of the counter.

And, as for packaging, your meat or bread or sugar or what ever probably went into a paper bag from which the grocer had to slap the dust and which he opened by blowing into it.

But What A Change

Well, times have changed. Nowadays you can buy pickles and juice together, in a bag of transparent film, and in a window carton, so you can see, but not touch or spill, what you are getting. If you've had a minor accident and cut yourself you can get bandages, ready soaked in medical dressing and packaged in a cellophane bag from your drug store. Ice cream comes in a fiber can, opened by pulling a string. Bicycles come in fiberboard containers instead of wooden packing cases, to be opened with a knife instead of a hammer. You can get a carton of razor blades with a slot that expels one blade at a time, as you need 'em.

You can get your coffee vacuum-packed, although it is in a paper bag instead of a can, and if you polish your shoes at home you can buy a combination brush and tube of shoe cream that spreads the cream properly on the brush as you use it. A card of buttons will have each button wrapped in transparent film, separately. You can buy special soap for young-uns with a popular fairy story printed on each label.

And, if you really want to impress the favorite girl friend, you can get a gift package at a department store that is dolled out in quilted satin and genuine ermine tails.

These are but a few. Last year

30,000 new and novel ideas in packaging were entered in a national packaging contest.

What It Has Done

Modern, scientific and artistic packaging has done, probably, as much as anything to change our ways of life. Did it ever occur to you that without modern packaging the modern grocery store, the drug store and the meat market would not exist? Without packaging there'd be no chance, either, for the little business establishments that dot the sides of the highways, or exist handily on a quiet street corner.

Without a sanitary, protective packaging there'd be no chance for science to conquer disease, as it is doing, and, without packaging, the quality of the things we eat and wear and smoke and drink would be far, far below what they are today.

For a package involves a label, and a trademark. And the buying public buys by the label. If the product is known, by experience or advertising, to be good and backed by a responsible maker, the public buys. If not—let's get the brand we know, shall we? And, finally, modern packaging has reduced prices to the consumer. For it, in conjunction with advertising, has made quantity production and quantity distribution and quantity sales a reality.

We owe a lot to the packagers, don't we?

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Preferable NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—It were futile to challenge the Popolo Di Roma's version of the method by which American diplomatic representatives are selected, but still that system, with all its vulgar faults, may be preferred to the Italian way. That is, Americans may prefer it while wishing, nevertheless, for improvement. There is no way of learning, however, what the Italian people think about anything, including their Count Ciano, who married into his job.

The Popolo Di Roma says that this country gives preference to enriched fruit vendors who have been generous to the campaign funds of the party in power, and that is approximately right. Some of the fruit vendors are newspaper publishers, some are merchants and some are packers, but it would be dishonest to quibble. For general terms, fruit vendors will do, and it may be agreed, also, that they go to their posts untrained and, as a rule, are withdrawn to make room for other fruit vendors as soon as they have been got the hang of things. However, there is comfort for our pride in the comparison of the American way with the Italian way, for we begin with the fact that Italian ambassadors and ministers must be members of the Fascist party, which means that they must be racketeers at heart and probably by practice.

In The

Early Days. Fascism in Italy was customary for dead-beats and crooks of various kinds to join the party and denounce as enemies of the regime those whom they wished to put out of the way. The man who owed another man an honest debt would put the finger on him and have him shipped away to a prison camp or killed.

Of course, not all members of the party were active or positive crooks, but membership in the party bespoke a very hardy tolerance for the most unspeakable treachery, dishonesty and criminality. And some of the most distinguished patriots—or patrioters, as they would be called in Americanese—were some of the most unscrupulous rotters of the Italian middle and upper classes.

The more brutal and indecent a man was, the more ready to persecute another man, even unto death by torture, the more likely he was to qualify for a party job and a handsome broadcloth uniform with a buzzard or canary on his cap. No eagle. The eagle was for Mussolini, although it could be mistaken for a vulture.

Lacked

Our Ability. Fascism did not substitute the Mafia system for the more enlightened but more difficult semi-democratic system. This just proved that the Italian nation, for all its culture and heredity, lacked the ability to do the crude American people. They had to resort to gangsterism on a national scale, and the distinguished Fascists of the present who came through the unsettled days when the racket was being run by the crude American people, were hoodlums of extraordinary talent.

They cut themselves in for commissions and concessions of all sorts, planted their relatives and mistresses in jobs which paid well and called for no particular ability, and those whose conduct proved them to be the least honest or decent rose to the top. For this was a system which placed the highest value on the lowest traits. Racketeering was not wiped out, but it made a party monopoly.

Now it may be that this produces the best kind of diplomats for Italian purposes, inasmuch as diplomacy, in the Italian, German and Russian system, is an elegant form of safe-blowing, porch-climbing and eavesdropping. And it may be admitted that our system does not produce the best kind of American purposes. But if we were to adopt the Italian way we would now be represented in Rome by Mr. Al Capone, and it is doubtful, even so, that we would get much better than an even break there, for Capone was a genius only by comparison with the rest of us in the United States. In Italy, the native land of the racket, he might be only a punk, and they might steal his shirt.

And, by the way, has anyone heard anything in the last few months about the indomitable legions of the Duce who advanced so briskly to the rear at Guadalajara and who now wear chain-mail chest protectors in the seat of their trousers? Weren't these indomitable legions going to do something to France a year or so ago when the cultured old world diplomacy of Italy was loudly demanding Tunisia, Corsica and Savoy? This would seem an opportune time for the Duce's brave legions to carry out those threats—unless, of course, in the actual face of war, their indomitability faded out.

This last is not strictly pertinent to the subject of the piece, but it is always a pleasure to revive the glories of Guadalajara. It drives the Italian journalists crazy, and there are few greater pleasures than to hear Signor Virginia Gayda scream about Italian honor in the honor of the hasty invincibles of Guadalajara.

Catapult "Push."

A method of measuring electrically the amount of "push" developed by the catapults used on battleships and cruisers for launching airplanes has been devised by the General Electric Company. Engineers say it means added safety for navy fliers because a dummy load, representing a plane, can be shot off the catapult and a measurement of its velocity taken before aircraft are launched at sea.

Long Trek.

The San Francisco world's fair announces that Theodore Zenner, 23, of Yaphank, N. J., is en route across the country knocking a croquet ball all the way. He hopes to arrive May 25, the opening date. Get it?—hitting the ball for the fair.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

RELIEF MONEY Recently there was portrayed on the pages of The Constitution the true story of a family in distress. The stories were written plainly, with every effort made to avoid any semblance of a "sob" story.

The stories were written so that, fact for fact, they fell into place, making a pattern of the entire problem. The response was immediate. Many, many letters arrived. Checks came in. Loads of food, coal and clothing were supplied. Rent was paid.

The family in question was relieved—temporarily. This illustrated one very human thing—The distress of one family, plainly put, aroused the city and state.

For many, many months efforts have been made to arouse the city over the plight of not just one family—but 10,000 families—where want, misery, starvation and illness are everyday and constant companions.

Many of those who sent in help to the family portrayed in The Constitution's articles sent messages saying they were aware of the fact a check, a load of coal or clothing were but temporary measures, brief stop-gaps. They asked the answer.

HUMAN MISERY AND VOTES Relief has been, and is, in politics. There is a great deal of buck passing on the part of some of those responsible.

While county employees, doing less work than trained welfare workers are well paid, the relief workers constantly are harassed. They are required to have college educations and specific training in their work. Most of them must furnish their own automobiles. Yet the salaries are about two-thirds of that paid a file clerk or stenographer who is also secure without harassment and threats of further cuts and reductions in the number of jobs.

No job is more essential. There is no escaping the fact there is at least a small group which sees in the problem of relief an opportunity to force out the trained welfare workers and replace them with their own appointees. There is at least grounds for belief a small group will seek to make of the relief department a political unit. Public opinion is aroused. If it is kept aroused this effort may be defeated.

The misery of at least 20,000 persons, and perhaps 40,000, certainly is not something for politics. It is something for trained people to solve and assist. Only demagogic and insincere persons will insist that trained workers are not necessary. Human misery and votes are not ordinarily associated in the minds of the average citizen. Yet they are so associated.

THE SCALE OF MISERY

The scale of misery in Atlanta begins at the bottom with those who prowl the garbage cans back of hotels and restaurants.

That is shocking. It is not confined to Atlanta. It is not a new development. That is the bottom. Shadowy figures searching out scraps from garbage cans hardly appear to be human. They are a little less than human through misery and the shock of misery.

The scale goes on up. There are those who cannot get on WPA because of no physical condition. The hospital is inadequate. Operations are scheduled months ahead and unless emergency ones, must wait their turn. It is not the fault of the hospital.

Children alone make up many of the hospital cases. They are starved children. They are fed and go home within a few weeks. Within a few weeks they are back again. Starved. Sick.

There are in Fulton county 6,800 persons incapacitated by old age, disease. They can't work. About 4,900 receive a couple of dollars or less a month. They can't get anything. Some die from various diseases. Food would have saved most of them. Just food.

There were 34,000 persons, able-bodied, who filed for jobs with the state employment agency. A few more than 3,000 got jobs last year.

Private employment very properly picks the best from that lot. Those who have hernia, bad teeth, tonsils, malaria, or who have gone downhill because of too little food, are not picked. They slide on downhill.

THE FLAME OF DISEASE

There is your flame of disease. In that span, from the garbage cans on up, is where tuberculosis comes and spreads like wildfire. Therefore, your hospitals can take care of them. The city's and county's expense there is increased.

There is your flame of sickness of all kinds, your breeding place of crime and therein is being trampled out the vintage of the grapes of wrath. It has been pointed out that three mills of the tax levy be allocated for the support of the poor.

And, as an additional one mill of the levy be allocated to provide medical and hospital care for the aged and the sick. And that the present total levy can be retained if economies are effected in departments less vitally needed.

Last year the tax millage was recommended at 2.25; the commissioners fixed it at 2.21. Of this the department of welfare received only 54 per cent, while the almshouse, hospitals, clinics and private agencies received the remainder.

The answer is plain. It can be solved. Taxes need not be raised. It is a question of human misery and human integrity. And not of votes or elections.

Those Who Have Something To Be Stolen Must Unite To Prevent Theft

By ROBERT QUILLLEN.

In every generation, some new reformer or climber pops up with the ancient theory that the end justifies the means.

This theory is cheered by his followers, for the human conscience is elastic in pursuit of profit or in heat of battle, but it outrages those who are injured by it. A hurt is doubly painful if the one who gives it is not only unrepentant but even asserts that his blow was righteous.

There was a time when prosperity was regarded as evidence of virtue, and solid citizens salved their consciences with the theory that any means of attaining prosperity must therefore be virtuous. When prohibition was in flower, many who considered it a righteous cause helped give it a bad name by approving the invasion of privacy, the employment of provocateurs and the more or less promiscuous shooting of suspects. Wrong methods were considered right if employed for a righteous purpose.

Militarists and empire builders, unable to make their countries greater by methods which are approved by the common conscience of mankind, convince themselves that any method is right if it serves the fatherland. Mere ethics must not interfere with glory.

Nazi officials call it "an exalted task even outside wedlock" to become the mother of a child by a soldier, and offer various inducements to encourage production of cannon fodder even if marriage is inconvenient.

Spalding Likes Journalism The South American Way

(Traveling Jack Spalding finds today that being a newspaperman in South America has its good and bad points. The journalist south of the border may get shot—or may become President. Even a reporter from the United States gets service, so Spalding experiences further enjoyment from his stay in Medellin and Quito.)

By JACK SPALDING,
Staff Correspondent.

QUITO, Ecuador, Friday, Feb. 16.—(By Mail)—Being a newspaperman in this part of the world has its good and bad points. To get the bad over and done with, asking a question and depending on the answer is fatal. You can ask one question all day and never get the same answer twice. It makes for variety, but inaccuracy.

We were several days in Medellin, and never found out the altitude of the place. Not that it mattered. We were told that it was low and that it was high. All anybody agreed on was that Bogota was higher.

We asked Colombians whether or not their country was the democracy it was supposed to be. "Colombians shall never be slaves," was one answer.

"We have democratic forms, but no freedom," was another.

"We are too democratic to get anything done," was a third.

The road from Bogota to Quito must have been measured once. It has been there in one form or another for 400 years.

"How many kilometers?" we asked.

"Four days," was one answer.

"It's a long road," was another.

We quit there, before somebody told us Quito was a moon and three sleeps away.

Decides to Measure.

Thinking to contribute one useful item to Pan-American lore, we decided to measure the road and started a log. The second day of the journey the speedometer broke.

Quito's population is divided on whether or not the city is north or south of the equator. Trying to solve the problem, we filled the tub with water several times and watched it spiral clockwise down the drain. We remembered reading somewhere that north of the equator whirlpools and cyclones spin in one direction and south of the line in another. Water spins clockwise here, but we couldn't recall what it does at home. So we asked the American legation, which informed us that Quito was 30 minutes south.

South Americans have a smug way of criticizing books written about them.

"Don't know where he could have gotten such absurd information," they say loftily of a famous author who got some facts twisted.

We know.

Exalted Profession.

On the other hand, newspapering is an exalted and honorable profession in these parts. As one used to the sudden slamming of doors and hanging up of telephones when the word "newspaper" is mentioned, the effect the same word has on South Americans is more than gratifying. It kills in your life.

Doors swing wide, customs officials who started out being officious all but end up beating their heads on the floor; hotel managers haul out clean sheets, and prices come down.

While we gave up trying to translate these lands into English a month ago, local newspapers more or less tell why their employees sit on pedestals instead of lying down among the creeping and crawling things.

As we have seen it, journalism south of the canal is the highest form of criticism. It is a lively, personal, boneknocking, bareknuckled, feuding proposition. A reporter turns his ankle on a bad piece of pavement and the government editors pick up the opposition rebuttal on the streets that afternoon.

Colombian papers especially are more organs of debate and criticism than anything else. And their subscribers love it. The battle between the conservative and liberal press has twice the action and drama of the European war.

These papers don't pull their punches. South American newspapermen get shot at an early age or grow up to be President.

Welles Watched.

Big news right now is Sumner Welles' visit to Europe. The hard-boiled South American press thinks maybe the United States' Sir Galahad complex might send it to war again. And if it does, South America will starve. We are their last market.

South America, according to most reports, will not go to war unless she is forced. And some think that if the United States enters she may be forced. It will be an unpopular move.

These Latins are political realists. They have played with imperialist powers for more than a century, and know their game. They have had their own wars and know why they are fought.

They don't like the Nazi regime. But they aren't hysterical about it, and don't see the end of civilization in a German victory. They mind their own business. And they aren't susceptible to atrocity stories.

English, as a rule, is more economical than Spanish, a language that has many fine points and shades of meaning. But Spanish uses the same word for "propaganda" and "advertisement." It is "propaganda."

(Tomorrow Spalding tells of the fascination of Ecuador's parades—and funerals. People there love a good show, whether it's sad or festive, he finds. So the constant marching of carabinieri by day and night is colorful stuff which everyone enjoys. And it is these same men who figure grimly in the revolutions that come and go.)

GOOD MORNING

This (Monday) morning we left Dallas in time to drive to Waco for the chapel service at Baylor University at 10 o'clock. Dr. and Mrs. Singleton persuaded Mrs. Newton to issue a general order to the effect that I must change my mind and stay over long enough to go down to San Antonio and other interesting places in that section. (We were to leave for Atlanta tonight.)

Baylor University was founded by Judge R. E. B. Baylor, William Tryon and J. R. Huchins in 1845 at Independence, Tex. Judge Baylor was from Kentucky, a very able and prominent jurist, who rode horseback over Texas, holding court during the day and preaching at night. The grandfather of Mrs. Truett, Mrs. Singleton, et al. James B. Jenkins, had come out to Texas from Georgia, and had written back to Jesse Mercer, telling of the need of the pioneer country for the Gospel, adding, "Can't Georgia Baptists send us a missionary?"

In response to this appeal, William Tryon and J. R. Huchins came to Texas. They found in Judge Baylor a great leader and a great Christian statesman, and it is easy to understand how they settled upon him as the founder of the institution which is today the largest educational institution owned and operated by Baptists in the world.

The first president of the institution was a Georgian named Graves. I stood last Saturday on the spot where the university was founded at old Independence. With a stroke of the pen, they established not only Baylor College for men, but also Baylor College for Women. After some years, the college for women was moved to Belton, now presided over by Dr. Gordon Singleton, of Georgia, who married Miss Hallie Jenkins, and Baylor College for men was moved to Waco, where today I addressed a student body of 2,500 and a faculty of nearly 200 distinguished scholars.

Former Governor Patt Neff, of Texas, is now president of Baylor University, having succeeded the late Dr. S. P. Brooks, a Georgian. President Neff showed me over the new building, named for him, in which is housed the magnificent 25-toned carillon, given just before his death by Cullen Thomas, of Dallas. The chimes played as we followed the throng of students into the chapel. It is an exact duplicate of these chimes in the old house on the hill in which we hope to install this year at Mercer University as a memorial to Lee Battle. Baylor has tremendous influence in this empire of Texas, and throughout the world. They are holding with confidence to the idea and ideal of Christian education. I am grateful to have seen Baylor at Waco and Baylor at Belton.

WPA HELP

IN ALBANY DISASTER

Editor Constitution: Thank you for the editorial in The Atlanta Constitution on Sunday, commenting on the activities of the Work Projects Administration at Albany during the recent tornado disaster.

Such friendly comment helps us to do a better job for the people of Georgia. After all, except in emergency cases like this, when human welfare is the only consideration, the WPA is limited in what it can do by the extent of local sponsorship. Georgia communities have never taken full advantage of the possibilities of the WPA in putting the unemployed to work on useful projects for the benefit of all. When The Constitution helps make this clear, helps increase the usefulness of the WPA, I feel that it is doing a real community service.

This is not the first time that The Constitution has shown a splendid spirit of helpfulness, and I am deeply grateful.

ROBERT L. MACDOUGALL, Administrator.

Editor Constitution: I have been reading with interest your editorials concerning the condition of the state highways.

The road between Rome and Summerville is in a terrible condition. With a few days of dry sunshine they will be much worse. This road was in bad shape before the cold weather.

I agree with you that the roads built of asphalt, tar and stone are inferior to a concrete road. We do not know what a concrete road is in this part of the state. We have never had a representative on the highway board and consequently this part of the state no roads.

A law should be passed that all automobile and gasoline taxes must be applied directly for the building and maintenance of roads. Of course this law, if passed, would not give politicians millions of dollars to use as they see fit.

I have been reading The Constitution for years and like it very much.

A. B. HAMMOND JR.,
Berrymont, Ga.

Editor Constitution: We are delighted with The Constitution's newest column "Dreams and Dust" by Harold Martin.

We do not know Mr. Martin and he never heard of us, but we have been wishing for years that his big chance would come. It seems you have given it to him, and we believe, added to the value of your paper, also.

The Constitution has its place at our breakfast table every morning, just like one of the family. Front page for the head of the house, funnies for Junior, editorial page for Mother and magazine for grandmother. It's not grim silence either, but jolly discussion to start the day with a zest.

Thanks to you, and all the staff for a superlative paper.

Snow Is Lovely Shroud For Russian Dead--White

By WILLIAM L. WHITE,
Special Correspondent.

SOMEWHERE IN FINLAND: Now I will try very hard to hold myself in, and not cut loose with so many adjectives that they will run over your shoetops, yet it is a fact that this is the most beautiful war that anyone ever saw because snow covers everything which is ugly to the eye, such as wreckage of tanks, while everything that might be ugly to the nose (and there are numbers of them out there beyond the wire) is now frozen solid as marble and covered with snow as well, and so cannot be ugly either to eye or nose until the late spring thaw.

Last night was warm—only about ten degrees below freezing, and I spent four hours walking through the Finnish trenches—about five kilometers of it along the front lines, ending up in a front line dugout at midnight. The night was as still as death can ever be. There was no moon, and a low, muffled layer of clouds hid the stars. Since it was only a little below freezing the snow did not squeal under foot as it does in bitter cold, but was soft, and clung to you like fluffed cotton, and the two feet of this softness muffled every sound.

But since there was no living creature out in those woods—no crickets to sing or frogs to croak under two feet of ice—there were no sounds to muffle. There was only the soft padding of our own boots in the snow at the bottom of the trench, a sound that hardly went beyond the sandbags.

Pine Trees in Ermine.

The trenches ran through tall pines, and each of their branches was piled so high with snow that the last high flakes on each ridge must have been gently poured on with a pastry tube, or they would have toppled off. The snow was the cleanest, deepest white you can think of, because there was not for many miles any soot or dust to soil it.

Walking along the front line trench we would come upon a sentry standing there in the white darkness every 40 or 60 paces, looking out toward the white Russians with the white cotton hood over his steel helmet, and a white camouflage blouse over his uniform, so only his face and his automatic rifle were dark. Sometimes we would stoop to crawl through a narrow tunnel to a machine gun chamber with only one long horizontal slit facing the Russians.

Through this, with the machine gun's cold little nozzle by our temples, we would stare out at the nest, and a cigaret glow could bring half a belt of bullets.

But always when we stood still and looked over, there was only the snow-covered hard-frozen Russian dead hanging on the Finnish wire. These were very still. Beyond them was the bare space of No Man's Land. No sound came to the ear from it. In the trees beyond the Russian trenches was the same great silence.

And I know I have not told how very beautiful it was in this soft white darkness, when we stopped to listen to the stillness of death.

One man, kneeling to the very bottom of the trench would light a single match for his cigaret. Then each, bending over, would light his from its red end, and walk always holding them well down, and bending over for each drag, and again cupping the hands so that the rising red glow of the puff would not be reflected on the snow of the trench, for in that dim clump of trees beyond the wire was a Russian machine gun and killed last night a dog believed mad, which bit 18 persons.

More than 50 shots were fired at the animal as it led pursuers up and down icy, hilly streets in the Overbrook and Carrick residential sections, in a wild scene uncommon to city streets. Besides the cars of volunteer possemen, five radio patrol cars and five police motorcycles augmented the hunt over a two-mile radius.

Georgia Eleven Plans Air Trip for 1940 Dartmouth Contest

BULLDOG BOSSES CONSIDER FLIGHT AS TIME- SAVER

By JACK TROY.

If parental consent can be obtained and a few other details worked out, the University of Georgia Bulldogs will fly to Boston for the Dartmouth game next fall. The Constitution learned yesterday.

Georgia has a lot of traveling to do all year and especially toward the end of the schedule. So the matter of travel by air is being given a lot of thought at Athens. On the last four Saturdays, Georgia plays Tulane at New Orleans, Dartmouth at Boston, Georgia Tech at Athens and the University of Miami at Miami, Fla.

To avoid subjecting the players to such arduous travel, jumping from Louisiana to Georgia to Massachusetts, back to Georgia and on to the tip-end of Florida, the coaches prefer to make the Boston hop by plane if plans can be worked out, it is learned.

Georgia, of course, would not be setting a precedent. Last year L. S. U. players traveled by plane to Boston and walloped Holy Cross in one of the season's biggest upsets.

Air travel is being given a lot of consideration by other football teams. And in baseball, the Brooklyn Dodgers, in the majors, and certain teams in the Texas league are toying with the idea of taking all the long jumps by plane to save players' strength.

Of prime importance to Georgia, naturally, is the desirability of the boys being fairly fresh for Tech after taking on Tulane and Dartmouth on successive Saturdays.

If the plans work out, Georgia will be the first state school to transport teams by air. The late Young Strubling, Georgia's immortal heavyweight, was a confirmed air traveler.

Strubling made many of his jaunts to training camps by air and at other times just flew for the pleasure of it.

DONALD BUDGE, FRED PERRY WIN

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 22.—(UP)—Donald Budge and Fred Perry, seeded No. 1 and 2 respectively, marched into semi-finals of the $2,500 Southeastern Professional Tennis tournament with straight set victories today.

Budge, former national amateur champion, defeated John Nogrady, New York, 7-5, 6-4, 6-4. Perry dropped Frank Rericha, New York, 7-5, 6-4, 6-4.

In semi-finals tomorrow Budge plays young Art Hendrix, Lakeland, Fla., tennis coach at the United States Naval Academy, and Perry faces Walter Senior, Chicago, sixth-seeded.

Big Bill Tilden and Vincent Richards, one of the favored doubles teams, beat Lloyd Budge, Don's brother, and John Hendrix, Chattanooga, Tenn., 6-1, 8-10, 8-6, 7-5.

Upsy Daisy

The big sign on the fence at Sanford field noted, in red letters, that the Georgia gridders were engaged in secret practice (On February 21) and no one was allowed inside.

Johnny Bradberry and this correspondent, not believing in secret practice signs in February, carefully examined the gates along the fence. All were locked.

There was only one alternative. And that was to scale the towering barbed-wired barrier. It was no trick for the lanky Bradberry, who is built along the lines of Spec Towns, the ex-Georgia hurdler and now the track coach.

Bradberry made it up and over without so much as suffering one snag.

This correspondent, who must admit to a slight roundness, made it to the top, all right, but the problem then was presented as to how to get down on the other side. It was 10 feet to the ground, at least.

"Jump," said Bradberry. "I'll pick you up."

And so I did and he came through on the promise.

It later was revealed that I had more mud on my suit than Frank Sinkwich had on his uniform after a long scrimmage.

Yes, sir, it was a red-letter day—just as the sign indicated.

No Secret

Well, none of the coaches suspected the presence of "alien" observers. The scrimmage went ahead at full speed. Only twice did Frank Sinkwich and Cliff Kimsey fail to run for touchdowns when given the ball. Once Sinkwich slipped on the slippery turf. And another time Kimsey was tackled after a slight gain of some 35 yards.

Heyward Allen threw strikes to receivers. Jim Todd rifled aeriels 40 yards and more. Lamar Davis ran like a scab on a "mad" on. George Tepo, the towering end, scatted like a Texas jackrabbit in a broken field. Brooker Blanton, who has just returned to the squad, was a wild man with the football.

And such blocking! Allen, a mite of a back, knocked down 200 pounders much as if he were employing a hammer. Investigation proved, however, that all he used was a flaming spirit and 160 pounds of grit. The boy's a real inspiration to his larger teammates.

Wally Butts was doing a snappy job of directing, and "Ears" Whitworth's line was moving ahead like baby tanks, although a trifle faster.

Professor W. O. Payne, athletic director, sauntered down to the practice and he was heard to say, when one of the backs was tackled, "He didn't run so well that time." Golly, it looks like it's touchdown or nothing at Athens. Because his remark was made after the runner in question had gained about 30 yards.

After the flaming session—third straight scrimmage of the week—was over, Coach Butts dismissed the boys with a cheerful, "Fine scrimmage!"

And then he turned and spied invaders. The whoop which bounced off Ag Hill would have done justice to a Comanche.

Explanation

"How come—I mean, when did you get here?" the little man asked, without catching his breath.

"Congratulations on such a fine showing," interrupted Mr. Bradberry with a grin.

"What fine showing?" asked Coach Butts, still firing questions. "I am sorry you had to be here today and get the wrong impression. Had I known you were here we'd have put the real defense in there."

Sweepida, 30-to-1 Longshot, Captures $50,000 Added Santa Anita Derby

ROYAL CRUSADER ANNEXES SECOND IN RICH CLASSIC

Weigh Anchor Grabs Third Place; Hill's Winner Pays $68,600.

By ROBERT MYERS.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 22.—(P)—Conquering a field of 16 rivals in an upset that left the favorites a badly beaten lot, California-bred Sweepida won the richest event for 3-year-olds in the west today—the $50,000 added Santa Anita Derby.

A 30-to-1 shot in the betting booths, this spanking brown gelding, owned by H. C. Hill, of Stockton, Cal., took the big purse—$43,850 to the winner—with a burst of speed that kept him on top of the field from wire to wire.

ANOTHER OUTSIDER.

Ridden by Jockey Ralph Neves, Sweepida charged down the stretch in a battle with another outside candidate, Royal Crusader, and flashed across the finish line a length and a quarter in front.

Weigh Anchor, a field entry, finished a close third, while the prides of Kentucky, Maryland and Delaware—Gallahadion, Fairy Chant, Maestro Sascha, Tough Hombre and other eastern blue-bloods, trailed in out of the money. C. S. Howard's Midland was fourth.

Royal Crusader, owned by Walter Hoffman's R. C. stable of Ventura, Cal., won $10,000 for second place; William Ziegler Jr., of New York, who saddled Weigh Anchor, won $5,000 and Midland $2,500.

The winner paid off the fancy price of $68.60, $21.20 and $10; Royal Crusader paid $23 and $13, and Weigh Anchor $6.60.

FAST GETAWAY.

Speed horses got away fast as expected, but Sweepida got away faster and was leading the pack as the field pounded down in front of the grandstand. Going into the first turn Neves let Sweepida out and he moved into a length lead.

With Neil McCarthy's Augury, Weigh Anchor and W. C. Stroube's Exarch in close pursuit. Into the backstretch and down they ran, with the California pride holding his own, while the 5-2 favorites, Gallahadion and Tough Hombre, as well as Fairy Chant, trailed with the leaders.

Jockey Lester Balaski gave the whip to Royal Crusader, but he could never collar the pace-setting Sweepida. Weigh Anchor, with Johnny Longden aboard, charged at Royal Crusader, and it was a tight finish between the two, with Midland another close contender for show money.

Time for the mile and one-eighth was 1:51 3-5. Maestro Sascha, 3, Foxcatcher Farm's son, a Fairy Chant, fell at the three-eighths pole and did not finish. He was far behind at the time.

The betting handle for the race was $178,424.

Injured Tackle Subs Himself Into Scrimmage Lineup Without Coach's Consent. Once Kayoed Sub Warming Up.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

Most of the talk around Athens is about Georgia's famous freshman football players and how they are getting along in spring drills. But there is one junior on the team whose spirit and fight makes coaches wish they had 11 like him.

He is Wyatt Posey, a lanky, awkward looking tackle who is the dad-gumdest fellow you'll ever see. Standing six-foot-two and weighing only 180 pounds after a big meal, Posey played a lot of football last year and will play a lot more this year.

He is a country boy, knowing nothing but hard work. His home is in Headland, Ala. Posey suffered a broken leg in the Miami game last season and still walks with a slight limp. However, since spring practices have been underway, he has fussed and fretted like a childish old grandpa because coaches wouldn't let him scrimmage.

SUBSTITUTED HIMSELF. The climax came Wednesday afternoon. He could stand it no longer so substituted himself in the scrimmage without being told. Ears Whitworth was directing the varsity line against the Red Devils. He looked up after a play and there was Posey in the midst of the pileup.

"What the devil you doing in there, Posey?" he yelled. "Aw shucks, Coach," Posey replied, "my ankle is as good as it ever was. They tell me they even grow back stronger after they are broken. I'm all right."

Whit let him stay in for a couple of plays and then practice was over.

They tell a great story on Posey. Before the Kentucky game in Louisville last year, Posey talked a substitute lineman into warming up with him.

The reserve wasn't any too anxious to do it because he knew how hard Posey warmed up. But, after promising not to hit him in the face with his elbow and be very careful otherwise, Posey finally persuaded the reserve.

KAYOED RESERVE. They lined up against each other and Posey charged, knocking the reserve out. When Wyatt started the game, the sub was still out cold.

Posey is a great boy. He doesn't know what it is to take it easy. Whether blocking a dummy or team mate he puts everything he's got in it.

He is one of the most popular boys on the squad, a fact proven when he got several votes for team captain even though he is just a junior, and seniors are generally elected.

There is another junior who is doing right well in spring practice and, although it is hardly possible for him to beat out Truck Kimsey at the fullback post, he will see a lot of action. He is "Spider" Nelson, a 165-pound fullback, who was the fistic hero of the Georgia-N. Y. U. game last year.

His ball carrying, especially on spin plays, this spring has been one of the features of the drills.

COLUMBUS PLAYS G. M. A. IN FINAL

G. M. A. and Columbus High will ring the curtain down on the Big Seven prep basketball race to-night at Columbus, Ga. Tech High and Boys' High played Thursday night so that Boys' High could make a trip to Spartanburg to-night. Commercial and Canton moved their game up several weeks ago.

Tech High still has a postponed game with Commercial and Canton has a couple of postponed games to play with Jordan, of Columbus.

Columbus will rule a heavy favorite on their own court with Jim Homer, the league's scoring ace scheduled to increase his state record several points.

G. M. A. held Homer to 11 points on the Court. Park court the only game in which the big center has been held to less than 18 points this season.

Vol-Bulldog Tilt Seen as Sell-Out

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 22.—(P)—Steamed up over Georgia's basketball team as it hasn't been in years, Athens is expected to fill Woodruff hall Saturday for the Tennessee-Georgia game. They're tied for the Southeastern conference lead.

Vandy Coach Picks Vols to Win Meet

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 22.—(P)—Two factors, a stout defense and the advantage of playing on their home floor—make Tennessee's Volunteers favorites in the eyes of Jim Buford, Vanderbilt coach, to win the Southeastern conference basketball tournament.

"I don't see how any team can beat Tennessee on its floor," Buford said today. "Johnny M.uer has a real ball team and playing at home means a great deal more. Tennessee hasn't been a high-scoring team, but the Vols have been able to throttle the opposition."

BAD DICK RAINES TO GRAPPLE HERE

Heavyweight wrestling returns here Tuesday night at the Atlanta theater after an absence of six months.

Silent Bill Hartman, new promoter who was associated in staging mat shows here with Henry Weber and Frank Speer, made good on his promise to come up with a topnotch opening card.

Hartman waited for weeks to get a lineup he thinks will start grappling off on the right foot here.

Dick Raines, 240 pounds, one of the game's top drawing cards and exponent of the pile driver, will meet Tiny Morgan, 275-pound Californian, in one half of a double main event.

Dan O'Connor, whose great matches here two years ago are still the subject of comment, meets Roland Kirchmeyer, former Oklahoma Aggie ace, in the other 90-minute feature.

Buster Chatham, Here, Praises Jack Suydam's Play

ROOKIE SHOULD HIT IN SOUTHERN. SAYS LITTLE BUS

By JACK TROY.
Lil' Buster Chatham, who played shortstop for the Crackers for seven years, has been in town for a couple of days and renewing many old acquaintances.

Buster has been working all winter and is taking off about a week to visit friends here before returning to Texas to join the Fort Worth club.

Chatham had a nice break at Fort Worth last year. "We had a real reason for beating Houston, greatest minor league ball club I ever saw," he pointed out, "but we did and so I played in two Dixie series in a row. We made a little money out of the whole thing."

Buster played all 161 games—they play that many in the regular season—and also participated in every inning of the exhibitions, and every inning of the play-offs.

"I didn't miss a minute, stole 40 bases and batted 288. I notice there has been some talk of switching me to third, but Bob Linton hasn't said anything about it to me. We have a third baseman and so I guess I'll wind up back at short."

PRaises Suydam.

Buster had high praise for Jack Suydam, the young ex-Fort Worth outfielder whom he recommended to the Crackers.

"The Texas is a tough league for left-handed hitters. The wind is always blowing in and the fences are pretty long. He hit .235 out there and ought to boost that mark a lot in the Southern League. He isn't the best outfielder but he will be all right with a little polishing. I think he'll make Atlanta a fine left fielder. He'll certainly field better than Willie Duke," Chatham said.

A search of the records revealed yesterday that Suydam, former Auburn freshman, is 24 instead of 22. He is a six-footer, weighing 190 pounds.

Chatham revealed yesterday that he suffered a piece of bad luck during the season. He was hitting .330 and fractured his left thumb. He didn't leave the lineup, but it affected his grip on a bat.

REMARKABLE MAN.

"Say, there's one of the really remarkable men in baseball," Buster declared. "He hasn't a hair on his head, but he is agile, fast and can really hit that ball. They think the world of him at Houston."

Fort Worth apparently was licked in the first round of the Shaugnessy playoff. Houston won the first two games and was leading by two runs in the ninth inning of the third game. Then the infield blew up and Fort Worth won four straight.

The series between Fort Worth and Dallas was one the fans had been waiting to see for years. Fort Worth won four out of five.

And then, of course, with Ray Starr as the arch-enemy, the Cats defeated Nashville four games out of seven in the Dixie series.

"Starr was a great pitcher for us," Buster added. "I don't see why they let him get out of the Southern League."

Nig Lipscomb, old teammate of Buster here, also is spending a few days in town. Nig will play third for Spartanburg, managed by Dusty Rhodes, this summer.

KD Sextet Defeats Chi Omegas, 52 to 2

Kappa Delta romped over the Chi Omega sextet yesterday at Oglethorpe, 52 to 2.

Nancy Wham was star K. D. forward, netting 21 points. Marian Gillioley garnered 10 points. Substitute forwards, Fuller and De-freese had 8 each, and Millie McKay 5.

Jean Bauer Will Battle Pat Berg at Orlando Today

ORLANDO, Fla., Feb. 22.—(UP) Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., tomorrow has the task of playing the favorite, former National Champion Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, in semi-finals of the mid-Florida women's golf tournament.

In the other semi-final, Mrs. Lillian Zech, Chicago, meets Clara Callender, Long Beach, Cal.

Miss Bauer today defeated Marian Miley, Lexington, Ky., 2 up. Miss Berg eliminated Neona Copie, Toledo, Ohio, 4 and 3. Mrs. Zech bettered Medalist Laddie Irwin, Montclair, N. J., 2 and 1, and Miss Callender trounced Shirley Ann Johnson, defending champion from Chicago, 3 and 1.

Bob Sealy Sells 'Dot' To Dudley

ALBANY, Ga., Feb. 22.—Bob Sealy had a change of heart and let his friend, M. G. Dudley, of Spartanburg, S. C., talk him into selling Dot Sealy Momoney, a little setter considered a great prospect by bird dog men.

Mr. Dudley would not reveal the price but it was estimated that it ran into four figures.

George Cragle will handle the young setter.

Sigo Farkas, well-known Albany field trial enthusiast, did not have an easy time handling Gobbler, one of his dogs, this afternoon. In fact, the Gobbler's conduct exasperated him so much he exclaimed, "I'm gonna plow 40 acres of peanuts with him before the next trial."

RIGGS COASTS INTO 2D ROUND

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Dick Shipp is an 18-year-old student at Harrisburg (Pa.) Academy.

This fact, while unimportant in itself, took on significance today when he was matched with Bobby Riggs in the opening round of the national indoor tennis championships.

To prepare himself for the ordeal of meeting the country's No. 1 player, young Richard stowed away a hearty breakfast which included a big slab of ham, three eggs and three quarts of milk.

Thus fortified, he appeared at the seventh regiment armory, four hours ahead of time and paced the floor until Riggs appeared.

For the next hour, the prep school student gave a recognizable reproduction of a sparring partner making the champion's life moderately miserable. In the end Shipp was beaten, 6-4, 11-9, but by that time Riggs had had ample opportunity to adjust himself to the very special requirements of board court play.

As a footnote, though it should be added that Bobby, fresh up from Florida, wasn't trying too hard in his first match in the national indoor tourney. He rarely went after a ball if it meant moving faster than a slow trot, and he did very little of the retrieving which has made him a standout.

Don McNeill, the No. 2 seeded from Oklahoma City, couldn't get here in time and will play his first match Saturday. Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Ore., No. 3 seeded and No. 6 in the country, love only five games in beating Fred Krais, of New York.

Regional Title Is Won By Tip's Topsy Top

Rosetime Runner Up, Top Threat in National

Dot Sealy Momoney, Ichauway's Norias Ike, Cavalier Give Good Performance.

By TOM McRAE.

Rosetime, white and black setter bitch, owned and handled by Fred Jordan, of Atlanta, president of the Georgia Field Trial Association, was named runner-up by Judges Roy Persons, of Monticello, and George Stanberry, of Jefferson City, Tenn.

Both winners ran yesterday, Top finding one covey about a half mile off the course and handing it beautifully, while Rosetime had two finds on which she showed good form.

Bird dog men here in the lobby of the New Albany have been saying Top will be one of the dogs to beat in the National, to be run off next week at Grand Junction, Tenn., and his performance in the Regional seems to indicate he is at his peak. Top will be handled by George Cragle, regarded as one of the best.

Top was second in the Waynesboro trials and the next week won the Continental championship. He has been runner-up in the National Amateur twice. He won the Phoebe Futurity in Buffalo.

Major Trammell Scott, president of the Regional, praised the fine spirit and co-operation of the Albany people in making this year's event the most outstanding so far. He was amazed at the way Albany has rebounded from its terrible disaster of three weeks ago.

Three dogs that ran today gave good performances. They were Dot Sealy Momoney, black, white and tan setter bitch owned by Bob Sealy, of Cottondale, Ala., Ichauway's Norias Ike, white and liver pointer dog owned by R. W. Woodruff, of Wilmington, Del., and handled by Major Scott; Cavalier, white and orange setter dog owned by W. H. McNaughton, of Cartersville.

Dot had two finds in heavy cover which made it difficult to show to good advantage. Ike had four finds and Cavalier two. All had stylish points.

Gingerbread Fashion, owned by C. B. Ewing, of East Lake, Fla., and Mrs. B. C. Goss' Mercer's Millie showed up well yesterday.

Lady Norias Takes All-America All-Age

By GEORGE ROGERS, of American Field.

BROWNSVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 22. Lady Norias, white and black pointer bitch owned by A. D. Noe Jr., Jackson, Tenn., topped a field of 40 starters with four well-handled covey finds and was named winner, at the conclusion of the All-America Club's all-age event here today.

Second place went to one of the top-class performers of the country, Norias Aeroflow, white and lemon pointer bitch owned by W. C. Teagle, New York city. Aeroflow had only one find but a brilliant race. Third place was awarded to a dog that ran in the final brace this morning, Mississippi Broomhill Jake, owned by B. C. Goss, Cleveland, Ohio. Jake had two good finds.

The All-America derby championship began this afternoon with four braces completed, leaving six braces for tomorrow.

Two dogs have shown exceptionally well and found game. They are Norias Kremlin Joe, owned by W. C. Teagle, and Congressman 2nd, owned by J. B. Conran, New Madrid, Mo. At the conclusion of these trials tomorrow the entire caravan will move to Grand Junction, Tenn., for the opening of the great classic on Monday, the National Bird Dog Champions.

R. A. F. Reported to Have

By EDWIN STOUT.
LONDON, Feb. 22.—(P)—Germany's Black Raiders accounted for Britain's 29th naval loss of the war today, sinking a naval trawler in another wave of attacks up and down the British coast, but suffered repulses in fierce return fire from newly-armed small boats and lost two planes in hot sky fights.

German undersea activity also was reported in dispatches from Amsterdam to have resulted in loss of the 2,621-ton Finnish steamer Brita off the Irish coast. The crew abandoned ship after an explosion.

Sub Sighted.
"A submarine was sighted after the explosion," said the Brita's message.

Nine trawlers were attacked by the air raiders during the day, and one of them, the 540-ton navy boat Fishery, was sunk, the admiralty announced. Two officers and 19 men were believed lost, the

Call Across Sea Brings Valentine For Don at Last

HEMSTEAD, N. Y., Feb. 22.—(P)—Way back in 1937, Don Richon picked up the telephone in his Colgate University fraternity house and ran up $44.50 in a trans-Atlantic call to get himself a valentine.

The parental static was heavy when news of Don's costly plea across the ocean leaked out. Said his father, Jules L. Richon, an engineer of Freeport, Long Island: "That's ridiculous! My son hasn't enough money to be making phone calls to Europe."

But last night Don cashed in—by marrying the girl. He and his bride, the former Doris Johnson, made it a lifelong valentine at Christ First church here. And figuratively, at least, the collective "best man" was the bunch of unsuspecting Colgate freshmen who sold tags on the university campus for the "Belgian telephone relief fund"—to finance Don's call to Miss John in far-off Brussels.

admiralty said, and only one crewman saved.

The naval trawler Solon also was bombed and raked with machine-gun fire, but the attacking planes were driven off by sharp fire, and the boat returned safely to land.

R. A. F. Busy.
The busy royal air force, which prime Minister Chamberlain only yesterday said was ready now to meet attacks of any size and strike back, was reported to have attacked German torpedo boats in continuing reconnaissance flights over Germany's northwestern sea bases of Borkum and Helgoland.

Accounts of the German air activity said the Nazi warplanes swept up and down the east coasts of England and Scotland in an intensification of efforts to cut Britain's food supply lines, which the British press is calling "vengeance raids" over the attack of the British destroyer Cossack on the German vessel Altmark off Norway last Friday night, in which 299 British prisoners were rescued.

One of the German bombers shot down by the British crashed in a farm field on the outskirts of Coldingham, near St. Abb's Head, southeastern Scotland, while the other plunged into the sea off the coast of Northumberland.

Jews, Arabs, Once Enemies, Dance Together

JERUSALEM, Feb. 22.—(UP)—A few months ago the Jews and Arabs of Palestine were at each other's throats with murderous ambushes occurring daily. Tonight Arab boys and Jewish girls were dancing together in Jerusalem cabarets.

The Jews and Arabs have forgotten their differences in connection with the new economic life which constantly arriving British troops have injected into Palestine. In many places Jews and Arabs work peacefully side by side digging trenches, filling sandbags and building barracks.

to the colors tonight as the Red army, hammering relentlessly at the Mannerheim line, continued a tremendous offensive which the Finns said was being repelled with heavy losses after reaching a point 12 miles from Viipuri.

Approximately 2,000 Russians were reported killed at Taipale in unsuccessful assaults on the east flank of the line, while on the opposite flank the Finnish high command said the attackers had lost "large numbers" of tanks in fierce fighting.

The extent to which the Mannerheim line has been penetrated in the bitter battle that has raged along the Karelian isthmus for almost four weeks was indicated by the nightly communique, which acknowledged that the fighting had reached the vicinity of Kamara.

The village is a station on the railway line from Leningrad to Viipuri, about 32 miles from the Russian frontier and about 12 miles from the Finnish seaport at the head of the Gulf of Finland which is the immediate objective of the Soviet drive.

(In London the Exchange Telegraph's Helsinki correspondent reported tonight that Viipuri was being shelled incessantly by six-inch Russian guns, the United Press reported.

Aerial activity grew in intensity as the Finns sought to relieve the pressure on the Mannerheim line by bombing enemy troop concentrations by night as well as by day.

MOSCOW, Feb. 23.—(Friday)—The Russian high command early today announced the occupation of 21 more fortifications in Finland's Mannerheim line, but admitted that activities of its air force had been cut short by a raging blizzard.

The communique said that the occupied fortifications included 15 "iron and concrete forts."

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 22.—(UP)—The commander-in-chief of the Swedish northern army corps today received orders to strengthen air defense units and to fire on sight at all Russian planes which appear over Swedish territory.

This aftermath of yesterday's bombing of the Swedish frontier town of Pajala was accompanied by an announcement of the commander-in-chief that the Swedish air force will enter into action immediately if foreign planes again cross the frontier.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—(UP)—The menace of war in the Near East increased today, in French opinion, with the receipt here of dispatches reporting mass arrests by Soviet authorities in Georgia and Armenia, in the vicinity of pipelines carrying Baku oil to Black Sea ports.

The dispatches said that Russian reinforcements which have reached the Tiflis basin included some of the best units of the Red army.

KIRKENES, Norway, Feb. 22.—(P)—An undetermined number of British warships are lying off Finland's Petsamo district and Russia's arctic coast near Murmansk, it was learned definitely here tonight.

Meanwhile, the reports that British and French warships are cruising in the Arctic ocean in the

NERVOUS RUMANIA MASSES MORE MEN

Bans Export of Many Raw Materials, Manufactured Goods.

BUCHAREST, Feb. 22.—(P)—Rumania, showing increasing concern over the possibility of war in the spring, today increased her armed forces and published a sweeping decree banning the export of a long list of raw materials and manufactured goods "necessary for the national defense."

Many of the 200,000 reserves who originally were called for March 1 were ordered to start reporting immediately for service with the nation's armed forces. These already number 1,400,000 men and, with the latest call, a virtual state of mobilization will be in force by March 1.

The government, meanwhile, was reported hoping to stave off a showdown in the increasingly tense Allied-German struggle for a major portion of its oil exports by offering Germany the entire government's legal share of the product of Allied and neutral oil corporations at Ploesti.

With the arrival Monday of Dr. Karl Clodius, German economic expert, the Nazis were expected to make sharp demands that Rumania fulfill her promise to sell Germany 1,680,000 tons of petroleum in 1940.

GOVERNOR'S RACE

Welfare Head Defers Decision on Candidacy.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Feb. 22.—(P)—State Welfare Director Braswell Deen says he is "not in a position at the moment to make a statement or a decision as to whether or not I will be a candidate" for governor.

In a letter to W. Ralph Smith, one of the sponsors of a movement to draft the former congressman for the September race, Deen said:

"In fairness to a number of friends who have written me during the past few months, urging me to make the race for governor, together with those friends who have called on me personally, I will have to make a statement some time later on."

VANDERBILT PETITION TO BE FILED IN WEEK

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 22.—(P)—Mrs. Helen Varner Vanderbilt said today she would file suit against Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., author and lecturer, for separate maintenance "possibly within a week."

She declined to state the grounds she would advance, but said they had been estranged for five years. The suit, she added, "will tell the story" of what happened when she left Vanderbilt's Lake Arrowhead home in the middle of the night five years ago.

Murmansk is Russia's only ice-free arctic port and has become an increasingly important factor in the part Russia plays in European affairs.

EFFORTS TO SAVE EDITH CAVELL TOLD

Dramatic Fight by U. S. Diplomats Revealed in Lansing Papers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(P)—Dramatic details of American diplomatic efforts to save Edith Cavell, British nurse executed by the Germans in 1915, were published today by the State Department together with disclosure that:

All efforts of the American legation at Brussels were carried on with consultation with the State Department.

Walter Hines Page, American ambassador to London, turned over to the British an official American account of the case, and British authorities published it without authorization.

German authorities in Belgium were much incensed by the publication, and Brand Whitlock, American minister at Brussels, reported that it was with difficulty that "serious complications" were avoided.

The Cavell case, which created a furor in England and America, is covered in the Lansing papers, the correspondence of Robert Lansing, World War secretary of state, which were published today by the State Department.

Miss Cavell, who was head of a Belgian training school for nurses, was convicted by a German court-martial of "having hidden in her home English and French soldiers as well as Belgians of the age to bear arms, all desirous of going to the front." The German authorities said she "confessed to having furnished these soldiers with money necessary to travel to France and to having aided their departure from Belgium by procuring guides to conduct them secretly across the Dutch frontier."

She was tried secretly and the German authorities did not inform the United States legation, at that time looking after British interests in Belgium.

On the night before the execution, October 12, 1915, the legation learned of the death sentence, however, from a source which is not disclosed. Whitlock was too ill to see the German authorities personally, but he dispatched Hugh Gibson, secretary of legation (later ambassador to Belgium), to Baron Von De Lancken, chief of the political department of the German general government in Belgium, with a letter in which he said:

"My Dear Baron, I am too ill to present my request myself but I appeal to your generous heart to support it and to save this unfortunate from death. Have pity on her."

Baron Von Der Lancken himself did not know of the sentence of execution, but telephoned the presiding judge of the court-martial and was informed that the sentence had been handed down and would be carried out before morning.

Gibson used every argument he

Students' Club To Celebrate Fortieth Anniversary Today

By Sally Forth.

... A TIERED wedding cake topped with 40 birthday candles will center the banquet table at East Lake Country Club today, where members of Inman Park Students' Club will gather to celebrate the club's fortieth anniversary. Former members of the organization have also been invited to participate in the event, and Sally prophesies that a good time will be had by all.

The club's colors, gold and white, will predominate in the candles decorating the cake, and placed at either end of the table will be clever reproductions of scenes in South Carolina and Florida, respectively. The Florida scene will be taken from Marjorie Rawlings' best seller,

"The Yearling," while a scene from the coastal shores of Beaufort and Charleston, S. C., will be improvised to suggest the Palmetto State. The latter scene was inspired by the novel, "Sea Island Lady," written by Francis Griswold. Guests will find their covers by pastel-colored shoulder sprays to which their placecards will be attached.

Mrs. L. T. Pattillo will be toastmistress, assisted by Mrs. T. H. Jeffries. A toast to the club of yesterday will be answered by Mrs. I. N. Lozier, while the toast to today's club will be responded to by the respective members. Guests will be required to submit brief sketches of themselves in reply to this toast, the sketches to be interchanged among those present for reading. Of course, the point in the game lies in the ability of contestants to guess the members indicated by the various descriptions.

... DINING AND dancing have taken on additional glamour since the opening of the Capital City Club's new Mirador room, where the lighting simulates moonlight, and magnolia painted on the mirrored walls are so realistic that one imagines they have fragrance. Now comes announcement that Saturday evening's dinner-dance in the charming spot will go a step further, for a special feature is planned to add interest.

At 10 o'clock that graceful and rhythmic pair, Martha Ridley and Gregory Stevens, will glide upon the floor in a brand-new exhibition dance, and those of you who are acquainted with the perfection of their art will realize a treat is in store.

But best of all, the guests will be permitted to take part in a contest to be conducted by Martha and "Gregg." One by one they will instruct couples in a series of dances, teaching the intricate steps of the Conga, the Viennese waltz, and the rumba. Popular vote will determine the couple most adept at mastering the steps, the winners to be awarded a bottle of champagne!

... MR. AND MRS. Kenneth McIntosh will leave early this morning by motor for Bristol, Va., the purpose of the trip, of course, being a visit to their only daughter, Jean, who is a popular student at Sullins College.

You see, the annual Mardi Gras at Sullins will be held this week end and to Jean has come the signal honor of being named a member of the queen's court at the brilliant festival. In case you don't know, this honor is not awarded merely for being cute and pretty. Candidates must have a Grade A scholastic rating, in addition to being lovely to look upon.

Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh will be accompanied on the trip by one of Jean's Atlanta friends, Dennis O'Brien, and the trio will be among the enthusiastic members of the Mardi Gras audience. It is good news for her host of friends here that March 21 will mark Jean's arrival in Atlanta to spend the spring holidays with her parents on Woodward way.

... THE AXIOM that "mother knows best" would be disputed by a trio of future belles. A few days ago the mother of the little girls was preparing their supper because it was the cook's night off. The meal was keenly anticipated by the trio because they were to have their favorite dessert, vanilla ice cream with chocolate sauce.

When the delicious dessert reached the table, the second daughter was the first to taste it. No sooner had the spoon reached her lips than she made a wry face and stubbornly refused to finish her ice cream. One by one, the other two reacted as did their sister. Noting their disapproving expressions, the mother became quite vexed at their lack of manners and told them they should eat every bit of the dessert.

Finally, realizing there was something wrong with the course, the attractive matron tasted it and discovered she had covered the ice cream with black bean soup!

... STRAINS OF "Happy Birthday" from the harp of little Beverly Griffith Dobbs drifted through the big red stone home of Miss Edith Taylor Wednesday evening at a musical celebration of the birthday anniversary of Miss Taylor's sister, Mrs. Cora B. Williams. The home, located on Peachtree and Prescott streets, was decorated throughout with red roses and white narcissi, the favorite flowers of the honor guest.

The birthday dinner table was laden with delicious viands, and centered with a huge cake trimmed with gleaming candles. Beverly played her harp for the guests and wore the same dress she donned when she played for Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House.

In addition to the hostess and honor guest, covers were placed for a group of neighbors and close friends, including Mrs. Lelia Parris, Mrs. Cora Gardner, Mrs. Paul Seydell, Mrs. M. Griffith Dobbs, and Maude Jones, Mildred Cabiness, Irene Hill, Marjorie Weldon and Ruby Hill.

Tea Is Planned For Miss Mitchell.

Miss Ida Akers Feted at Parties

Miss Ida Akers, popular bride-elect of next week, was honored at two parties yesterday. Last evening Mrs. W. E. Schroeder Jr. gave a spinster party for the bride-elect at her home on Peachtree road.

A spaghetti supper was a feature of the evening. The table was centered with a cherry tree, and miniature busts of George Washington were used as place cards to carry out the birthday motif of the "Father of Our Country." Only members of the wedding party were present.

Yesterday at the luncheon hour, Miss Akers was honored at the luncheon given by Mrs. Rufus Darby in the Midador room of the Capital City Club.

The table was covered with a green satin cloth and centered with a silver soup tureen filled with white tulips.

Tea To Be Given For Miss Asher.

Miss Kathleen Asher, who will become the bride of James Wilkinson at an early date, will be honored Sunday afternoon at the tea at which Mrs. William Elsas and Miss Lois MacDonald will be hostesses from 4 to 6 o'clock at the former's home on Randall Mill road.

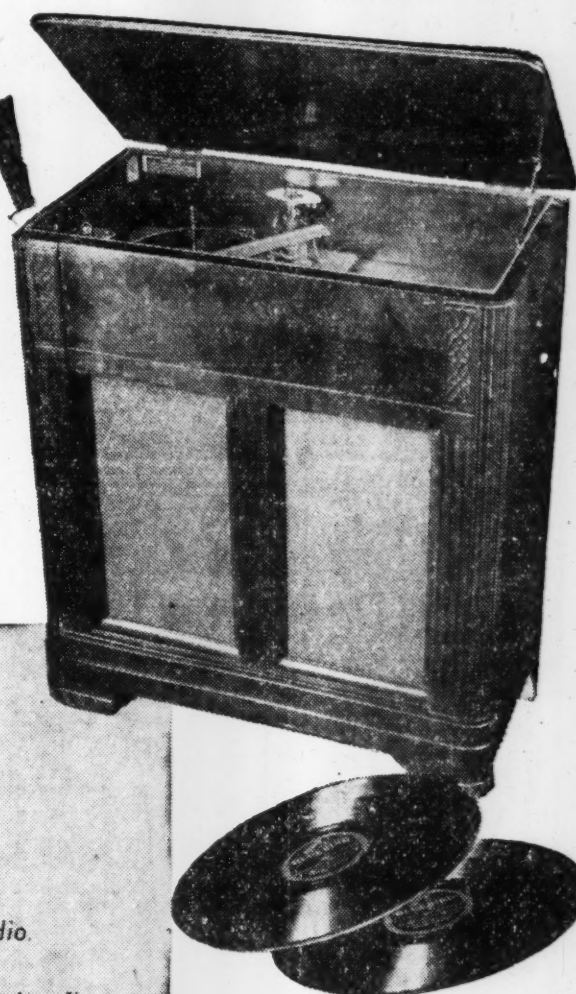

Pink tulips and quince blossoms will grace the lace-covered table, and pink tapers arising from old-fashioned candelabra will complete the appointments.

No. 149 Zero Hour

Your Own Horoscope for Feb. 23rd

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chiologist.

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—An excellent period for general business, buying and selling, dealing with financial people, educational ideas, inspirational ideas, legal matters. Between 8:40 a. m. and 4:27 p. m., favors making plans. After 4:27 p. m., an excellent period for carrying out well-laid plans.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—The entire day is most favorable for the unusual, for dealing with people who may be considered eccentric, for electric and radio activities, for work of a mental nature, and for activities that involve relatives and close friends.

May 21st and June 21st (GEMINI)—The day does not appear to favor making quick decisions. People born at this time of the year may find life rather exciting for the time being, or that their efforts are being curtailed around this date and they should also guard health.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER)—Several favorable influences culminate today, making this an auspicious time for dealing with those who are at the head of affairs, for financial deals, bankers, real estate, unusual and out-of-the-ordinary affairs.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO)—Previous to 3:15 p. m., favors dealings with friends, women, matters of art and adornment. The afternoon and evening hours hold influences that may cause thoughtlessness, changeability and, therefore, it would be better to go slow before venturing into new and untried affairs.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO)—You should be able to achieve much this morning. Your mind is clear, enabling you to grasp opportunities. The most favorable part of the day is previous to 3:30 p. m.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA)—Before 10:35 a. m., favors work of a mental nature, ideas dealing with iron, hardware, publishing, travel, communications, trading and contacting relatives. Put forth an extra effort to further your ambitions during the remainder of the day, for you will likely encounter a generosity that will be beneficial.

October 23rd and November 21st (SCORPIO)—An excellent day for progress along all lines. An auspicious day to seek favors, November 22nd and December 21st (SAGITTARIUS)—Action illy directed, quick flare-ups, and a refusal to consider others mark the entire day until midnight, making this a better day stay in the background. December 22nd and January 19th (CAPRICORN)—Previous to 10 a. m., does not favor dealings with women, electrical ideas.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS)—This may be a hard day when you will be called to task for something, but by giving strict attention to necessities this can be made a favorable period.

February 19th and March 20th (PISCES)—The entire day favors attention to general matters, business, home, social. After 7:24 p. m., favors dealings with those from whom you may expect generosity. However, moderation should be used in all things.

...FIGHT FOR LOVE...

Milton Blames Himself That He, Star Have Come To Love Each Other

By SYLVIA TAYLOR.

SYNOPSIS. Star Bright's lovely mother, Mamie, divorced when Star was a child, constantly talks of better days, and her stepfather Joe Delevan is mysterious about driving a truck at night. Mamie has insisted upon dancing lessons for Star, her ambition being that her child shine on the stage. Star makes no friends at school as she can entertain nobody at home. When she graduates from high school, her stenography teacher sends her to Nina Lambert, novelist, who wants a secretary to live with her. Nina's son, Bob, just out of college, falls in love with Star and plans an early marriage and Nina has Star bring her mother for dinner and purposely serves too much champagne. Star feels disgraced by Mamie's conduct and though Bob reassures her, she leaves secretly. She fails to find a job and when Mamie refuses to help her except by Joe's getting her a night club job, she is tempted to jump from a yacht harbor pier. Milton Wood, magazine business manager and a friend of Nina, stops her and gives her a job and she comes to realize him so that it is a shock when she learns he is married. Joe is killed by racketeers and Star must support Mamie. Wood makes Star his secretary. She sees Wood's beautiful wife Jennifer in a cafe with a furtive-eyed man and when she sees Mrs. Wood leaving this man's apartment across the hall from Mamie's, Jennifer tries to buy her silence with a gift of jewelry. Star rejects the offer and she loves Milton. Jennifer sails for Europe and Milton frequently takes Star to dine and dance. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT XXII.

His attitude to her that entire week was not unkind but completely impersonal. Night after night Star sat in her room heart-sick, with a feeling of absolute frustration.

What was the matter with him? What had she done? He not only did not ask her to dine with him but he did not mention that fact that he was unable to do so. She could see for herself that every night in the week was taken but when the week-end arrived, Sunday had been left free. Was he planning to see her then?

By Saturday noon Star had worked herself into a state of nerves the more agonizing because it must be concealed. She had forced herself to appear cheerfully unaware of any change in his attitude. She had been the efficient, silently sympathetic secretary but at a cost which registered now in her trembling hands. She typed, jittery with hope that he would ask her to spend Sunday with him, fear that he would not. If he didn't—what should she do?

Milton had a luncheon engagement and a dinner party for Saturday night. As he passed through her office he said hastily, "Good-bye, Star! Be good."

So then he did not intend to see her over the week-end either? Star's heart plunged like a rapidly descending elevator making no stops. How could he treat her like this? What had Jennifer said in that letter which had arrived a week ago? Would Jennifer have nerve enough to tell him of Star's threat without admitting the reason for it?

Never had Star felt so hurt as she did that night. She longed then for diversion of any kind. If only Clifford Payne or Bruce Donovan would ask her for a date. But they were not even present at the boarding-house table that evening. Only those who habitually had no dates sat down to the table on Saturdays. Star joined them, ignoring their surprise.

"Well," one of the women commented, "this is unusual for you, isn't it?"

Star smiled and answered vaguely. Later she decided to call upon Mamie, but when she reached the apartment her mother was out. Every one in the city seemed to have something to do but Star. She went back to her room and to bed, but not to sleep. Something had spoiled her relationship with Milton. A wall had suddenly sprung up between them.

Why?

"At least he might try to explain it to me," Star sighed.

Although it was late before she slept, she was awake early the following morning. Too nervous to remain in bed, she rose and dress. Suddenly she knew she was going to the yacht harbor. She had to go. He might not be there. Someone else might be with him, in which case she would not stop. But she had to know whether he was deliberately avoiding her.

Ten o'clock found her swinging past the long lines of yachts and cruisers snugly tucked into their berths. Her eyes, out-running her feet, picked out the adventures. No one was visible and Star's heart sank, but the lure the small craft had for her pulled her like a magnet. At the next moment Milton came on deck and saw her. "Why, Star," he cried, "what are you doing down here?"

He did not sound annoyed, only surprised as he gave her his hand and led the way into the cabin. "It was such a nice day I couldn't resist the temptation," she began, trying to be casual and failing as she saw that his face had become suddenly grim.

"What's the matter?" Star pleaded, unable to bear it any longer. "Please tell me."

The words seemed to be forced from him. "Can't you guess?"

She shook her head. "Maybe you are just tired of seeing me so often."

"I could never be tired of you!" he cried.

Her blue eyes, shining with surprise and delight, met him. "Then why did you stop?"

"I had to stop. It was all right as long as we didn't care—but now..."

"You mean that because we do care it has to end?"

He took her hands and his voice was very gentle as he said, "I'm married, Star, and I intend to remain that way. I've nothing whatever to offer you."

"It's all my fault," he continued when she did not speak. "I should have thought of this sooner..."

"It wasn't your fault," Star said stubbornly. "You couldn't have helped it."

"All the more reason that we should not see each other outside the office," Milton said miserably. "Oh, Star, you are too inexperienced to see the danger ahead. We wouldn't intend to do anything unfair or dishonorable but the more we were together the more justified we would feel. It wouldn't work, my dear! I'm sorry, I feel like a heel even saying this to you but we mustn't see each other any more."

"All the more reason that we should not see each other outside the office," Milton said miserably. "Oh, Star, you are too inexperienced to see the danger ahead. We wouldn't intend to do anything unfair or dishonorable but the more we were together the more justified we would feel. It wouldn't work, my dear! I'm sorry, I feel like a heel even saying this to you but we mustn't see each other any more."

She could tell him what she knew about Jennifer would he feel any differently? Why must their innocent companionship cease while Jennifer did as she pleased? But the news of his wife's deception could never come from Star.

She failed, "I understand. It's all right. Only please don't blame yourself," and stumbled from the boat blind with tears.

Star walked all the way to her boarding house, a distance of several miles. When she reached it she was exhausted but resignation had settled like dark waters above the tempest in her heart.

He did love her! How well she knew it! But Milton Wood was no weakling. He respected her too much to make love to her even if he had had no regard for his marriage to Jennifer.

What a situation! Typical, Star decided, of her entire life. Frustrated at every point where affection of her father, neglected by her mother, unwanted as a daughter-in-law by Nina, and now repudiated even as a companion as the only man in the world who mattered to her.

"Every time I find even a little happiness it is taken away from me," she thought desperately.

She had stopped for food but was unable to eat. She had no idea what hour it was when she reached her room, but she tumbled into bed and did not rise until the following morning. By that time she had decided upon a course of action. Milton had said he could not, would not see her outside the office. But she knew the torture it would be for them to work together.

"So long as the magic words had not been spoken they might have pretended, but that was impossible now. He would be too tender-hearted to ask her to find another position. He couldn't very well discharge her just because she had fallen in love with him. No, that was her responsibility. Star thought drearily. The experience she had had working as his secretary would make it easier to find something else and no doubt he would give her excellent references.

He would do anything he could to help her, but no one could heal the found in her heart. Useless now to tell herself she should not have been such a fool. She had loved him before she knew he had a wife. And the more she knew about that wife and her disloyalty the more Star pitied and loved him.

It was a vicious circle but it was not his fault. How dear and honorable he had been. So troubled to know that she shared his emotion, bewildered, blaming himself.

Nine o'clock found her in his office, pale but fresh as the rosebud which graced his desk.

"I think I ought to tell you that I am going to look for another position," she said in a low voice. "Must you?" he asked without conviction.

Her blue eyes, wistful and sad, met his.

"Yes. I hope you won't mind giving me a recommendation."

"I'll do that, of course, Star. Perhaps I may hear of someone who needs a secretary." He added anxiously, "You won't leave until you have something else?"

"I can't. I have to support my mother, you know."

He took her hands in his and for a moment the world whirled dizzily, then he said, "You're right. I know you're right and I admire you for it. It's the only way. In the meantime you may be sure I'll do anything I possibly can for you."

"You don't need to try to make it up to me for what happened," she cried in a small fierce voice. "It's the most wonderful thing in the world!"

Milton sighed.

"I'm afraid you give me too much credit. I'm not at all like the ideal you've built up in your mind."

"You're the finest person I have ever known," she insisted. "But I know your faults, too. You are quick-temper and irritable sometimes too when you're tired."

"What? You admit it?"

"Of course! But that's only because you're so sensitive. And, after all, you don't demand any more than you are willing to give."

"You spoil me, Star. You build me up until I feel like a superman."

"Well, you are one," she said so seriously that he smiled.

"We'd better be getting to work," he suggested. "It happens to be Monday morning."

A few moments later she was taking a letter for him, but nothing was the same. Nothing would be the same again. When noon came Star hurried with her lunch then put in her application at an agency he recommended, saying, "We often get girls from there. It's the best in the city."

At the CITY HALL

Dr. John M. Walton, head of the city health department's drive against venereal diseases, yesterday was preparing to enter training as a motion picture operator. He has several films dealing with this particular subject, and proposes to exhibit them to clubs and organizations in a city-wide educational campaign this spring. "We have to be more than a plain doctor to do this job correctly," Dr. Walton said as he surveyed his new equipment.

Ten years ago yesterday the seat of the Atlanta city government was moved from the old four-story brick building at Marietta and Forsyth streets to the modern skyscraper city hall on Mitchell street. L. Glenn Dewberry, superintendent of the building, called the fact to the attention of all and sundry, and incidentally mentioned that Washington's birthday—yesterday—marked his seventeenth year on his present job.

Carl T. Sutherland, city personnel director, will be the principal speaker at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the meeting of the Grant Park Civic Club at Slaton school, it was announced by A. C. Hopkins, president.

The Atlanta public appeared to believe the city hall was closed yesterday in observance of Washington's birthday. Few persons called there. Joseph Gregg Jr., the mayor's executive secretary, excused Mrs. Etta Rhamstine during the afternoon, saying, "There's no need for both of us to waste a whole afternoon."

Dr. John P. Kennedy, city health officer, yesterday was preparing to ask the city personnel board for two new city doctors to administer the revised food handlers' ordinance. The new positions will be filled in time for the physicians to take over examination of all persons handling food before the new provisions of the ordinance become effective July 1.

Atlanta City Employees' local union No. 4 yesterday announced the following have been designated as representatives of the delegate assembly of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees: B. H. Hall, E. O. McCollum, S. C. Langley, W. B. Walker, R. C. Witche, Mrs. Ruth Thornton, Roy A. Steel, W. A. Florence, Miss Julia Elliott, Mrs. Mabel Terry and E. R. Sims. Florence, Langley and L. E. McArthur will represent the group at the Southern Labor Conference, to be held in Atlanta March 2-3.

OLD VELVET

BRAND — BLENDED WHISKEY

A modern "extra light" whiskey with the glorious flavor of bygone days!

BACK TO THE grand and glorious days of our grandfathers, we went for the flavor of Old Velvet. Then, whiskey was mellow as sunlight in the fall.

We put this mellow flavor into an extra light whiskey—into Old Velvet, a whiskey as light as a breeze in May.

And man—what a combination this whiskey makes! You won't believe it, until you try it.

The straight whiskies in Old Velvet are four or more years old. Each is mellowed to velvet smoothness. But to make Old Velvet extra light the straight whiskies are skillfully blended with neutral spirits distilled from fine American grain.

Package stores sell Old Velvet now. So the rest is up to you!

OLD VELVET BRAND BLENDED WHISKY—90 proof. The straight whiskies in Old Velvet are 4 years or more old, 33 1/3% straight whiskies; 66 2/3% grain neutral spirits; 5% straight whiskey 6 1/2 years old; 28 1/4% straight whiskey 4 years old.
